No dirty-trick charges laid

Shadow will remain until file public: NDP

By JAKE BANKY

No charges will be laid as a result of the four-month long RCMP investigation into allegations of political dirty tricks by Social Credit in the last provincial election campaign.

Attorney-General Allan Williams said today no evidence was found to warrant the laying of charges either for sending forged letters to newspapers or for counselling such forgeries.

The minister said he will not release the foot-thick RCMP file on which Crown counsel based the decision not to lay charges.

NDP leader Dave Barrett said Williams' announcement does not mean an end to the lettergate-dirty tricks affair which has flourished in the headlines since last September.

"The shadow over Social Credit will remain until the full RCMP report is released," Barrett said.

"To investigate oneself and then to say 'I am clear' is not good enough."

Three Socred officials resigned and four were fired during the course of the dirty tricks affair.

Of 54 questionable letters investigated by the RCMP, only 10 were shown to have been signed fictitiously or with forged names, Williams said.

However, it was either found impossible to prove who wrote them or the letters failed to meet the legal qualification for prosecution under the Criminal Code.

Williams said for a charge to be laid, the letter must be shown to have been written with the intent to be used to prejudice someone "or that some person should be induced, by the belief that the document is genuine, to do or refrain from doing anything."

Williams maintained the writing of forged letters during the election campaign did not reveal such a motive.

He also said there was no evidence of a co-ordinated program of false letter writing by Social Credit party workers, although two former Socred caucus researchers have said there was such a campaign.

The RCMP investigation into allegations of caucus researchers counselling to commit forgery also came up blank, the attorney-general reported.

Williams said while remarks by some researchers might have been construed as advocating the use of false names on letters to the editor, it could not be proved that this was "advocated for the prohibited intent."

In other words, the evidence failed to meet the requirements of a "counselling charge" under the Criminal Code.

Williams, however, attacked the Socred letter writing practices as "cowardly, reprehensible and irresponsible."

He urged newspaper editors and publishers in B.C. to take steps to ensure that the letters they publish in the future are authentic.

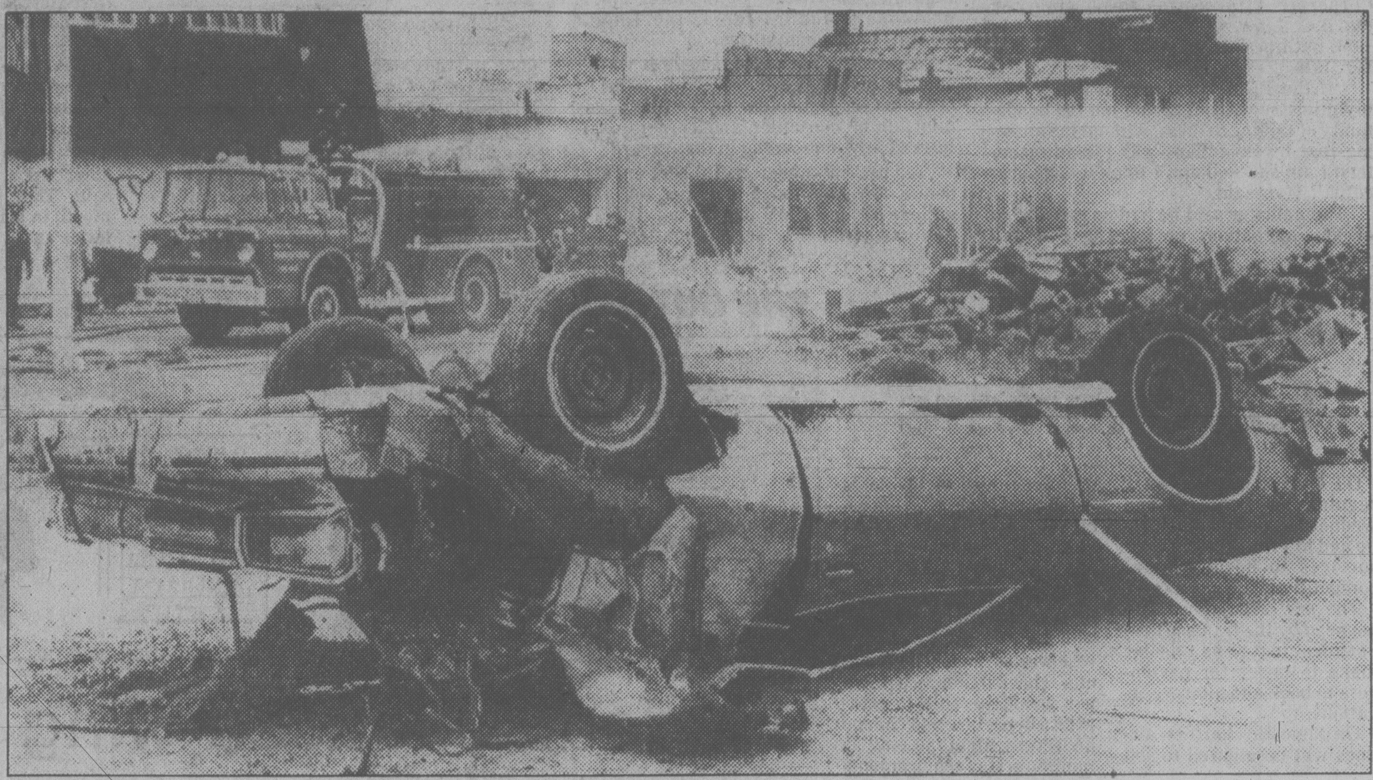
Williams said he does not know how much the RCMP investigation will cost the taxpayer but he agreed it will be substantial.

Two former Socred researchers, Jack Kelly, who resigned, and Ellen Mackay, who was fired, have threatened to bring suits for wrongful dismissal.

Their lawyer, Robert Gardner of Vancouver said today he is "very gratified" to hear the decision.

He said he is unsure whether the two want to pursue a civil action for wrongful dismissal.

Gardner said the pair received three months' severence pay after they were fired but neither has been able to find another job.



RUBBLE SMOULDERS after explosion levelled a downtown block of stores and apartments and caused a fire that damaged several adjoining buildings early today in Essex, Ont., about 20 kilometres east of Windsor. Police say a car struck a gas meter behind a hardware store and the leaking gas filled the store just before the explosion. No deaths were reported but a passenger in the car was reported in danger of losing an arm. An impaired driving charge was laid. Damage was estimated at $4 to $6 million.

Fall by Read blows medal

Times News Services

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. — Ken Read of Calgary, Canada's major hope for a gold medal in Alpine skiing at the Winter Olympics, fell near the top of the course today and failed to finish the downhill competition.

Leonard Stock of Austria edged countryman Petr Wirnsberger for the gold.

Steve Podborski, 23, of Toronto won the bronze medal, the first ever taken by a Canadian in Oympic men's Alpine skiing and the first medal for Canada at the current games.

Read, winner of two major downhill races this winter, was not injured. He spilled on the third turn when his inside ski came off.

Dave Murray of Whistler, B.C., placed ninth while Dave Irwin of Vernon finished 10th.

No funding for games

Times News Services

A Progressive Conservative government would withhold financial support from the Canadian Olympic Association if it proceeds with the Summer Games in Moscow, Prime Minister Clark said Wednesday.

The decision by the International Olympic Committee to proceed with the games is wrong, Clark said in an interview in Hamilton, and said he will seek a boycott.

"I think the IOC clearly was wrong," Clark said of the committee's decision Tuesday to keep the Games in Moscow despite a request from United States President Carter to move them because of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

Clark said he will still ask Canadian athletes to boycott the Moscow Olympics if Soviet troops are not out of Afghanistan by next Wednesday, two days after the general election.

In Vancouver, Liberal Leader Pierre Trudeau reiterated he still would support an Olympic boycott if enough nations were prepared to.

He said: "I don't think support of a boycott that is going to show the Western nations and the Third World divided . . . is a good thing.

"I think this kind of symbolic gesture of boycotting the Olympics is only effective if it shows there is a massive participation not only by Western nations but by Third World nation."

In Washington, President Carter says he sees "no possibility" of U.S. participation in the Moscow Summer Olympics if the Soviets do not meet his Feb. 20 deadline for withdrawal from Afghanistan.

Living cost doubled since '71

Times News Services

The cost of living in Canada has doubled since 1971, Statistics Canada said today in its monthly Consumer Price Index.

The cost of living rose 0.6 per cent in January to bring the CPI — which was at the 100 level in 1971 — to 200.1 in January. As a result, the 12-month inflation rise for the last 12 months now stands at 9.5 per cent.

Viewed in terms of buying power, what cost the consumer $100 in 1971, now costs $200.10.

The government statistics agency said that higher transportation and housing costs along with higher food costs were mainly responsible for the over-all increase.

Increases were also registered for beef prices, coupled with higher cereal and bakery products.

The food index rose by 0.3 per cent in January, down from a 1.4 per cent increase in December.

Despite the reduction in air fares, transportation costs increased one per cent to bring the increase from a year earlier to 12.5 per cent and to lead the index for all consumer prices. Food and clothing are tied in second place at a rise of 11.3 per cent from January, 1979.

However, Canada's inflation rate is still well below that in the United States. The average rate for 1979 was 9.1 per cent while that in the U.S. was 13.3 per cent.

Twelve-month cost-of-living increases ranged from a low of 7.6 per cent in Vancouver to a high of 10.3 per cent in Quebec City.

Meanwhile, the average weekly salary of a Canadian worker, expressed in 1971 constant dollars, fell to $150 from $155 between the fourth quarter of 1977 and the second quarter of last year, says a report published by the Conference Board in Canada.

This drop of 3.2 per cent in the average salary represents a loss of purchasing power of about $4 billion, and the report says it is attributable to inflation and government controls on wages and prices.

Companies fared better than the workers.

The report says that between the fourth quarter of 1976 and the second quarter of 1979, company profits, expressed as their share of the national income, increased to 15.8 per cent from 12.5 per cent.

Hostages free in 48 hours?

Times News Services

Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr said today the 50 American hostages could be freed in 48 hours if President Carter accepts a plan approved by Ayatollah Khomeini.

And a UN spokesman said today he hopes to announce soon — "perhaps in the next 24 hours" — the composition of an international commission of inquiry to investigate alleged crimes against the shah during his 37-year rule.

The extradition of deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi to Iran was no longer a pre-condition for the hostages' release, Bani-Sadr confirmed.

However, a spokesman for the Moslem militants holding the U.S. embassy in Tehran said today he doesn't believe Khomeini has approved the release of the hostages prior to the extradition of the shah.

The spokesman conceded there had been no contact for some time between Khomeini and the militants, but stressed that the militants would only take orders from the 79-year-old Khomeini.

The Panamanian government has reportedly given Iran until March 22 to present its case for the extradition of the shah.

Speaking from Tehran to the Italian television network RAI, Bani-Sadr said if there were complications, the release of the captives could take two months.

"There is a proposal on President Carter's desk now which, if he accepts, can lead to the release of the hostages in 48 hours," Bani-Sadr said.

Bani-Sadr said the release of the hostages depends not only on an investigation into the regime of the deposed shah but also on America's guaranteeing Iran's geopolitical and economic independence.

"We depend on the United States for spare parts. They are essential for us," said

Tito remains critical

BELGRADE (AP) — Doctors reported today that President Josip Tito was in critical condition despite intensive measures to save the 87-year-old Yugoslav leader's life.

Prime Minister Veselin Djuranovic today cut short an official visit to East Germany to return to Belgrade.

"A certain improvement took place following the intensive measures of treatment, but the condition is still very difficult," the doctors said in a bulletin.

One Western diplomat said a Yugoslav source reported Tito's death was believed imminent. "But I take it that it's a question of days rather than hours," the diplomat said.

As Tito's condition worsened, the National Defence Council called for intensified defence preparations.

The council, drawn from the same group that will run the country if Tito dies, met Wednesday and "discussed the implementation of a program of development of the Yugoslav armed forces and the level of their capability," the official Tanjug news agency said.

In Washington, President Carter said Wednesday the United States is willing to seriously consider any request for aid from Yugoslavia if it is threatened by the Soviet Union.

But the President said Yugoslav leaders had stressed to him that they were capable of dealing with any external threats.

Mair disillusioned on H-program

By JAKE BANKY

Health Minister Rafe Mair is losing faith in the controversial heroin treatment program he inherited from his predecessor Bob McClelland.

Following a tour of the Brannen Lake treatment centre near Nanaimo Wednesday the minister admitted: "Where I was 60-40 in favor of it a few months ago, I probably have reversed myself after looking at the program and talking to people."

Mair gave two reasons for becoming disillusioned.

After talking to patients at Brannen Lake, he concluded it would be difficult to mix voluntary patients with addicts sent there by the courts.

"The mix is a very difficult one for the staff and for the clients," he said.

But the main reason is the lengthy legal battle the government faces in trying to reverse the court ruling that the compulsory aspect of the program is illegal.

Mair estimates it could take another two years to settle the question.

"And in the meantime I've got to have an alcohol and drug program."

That means, he said, that he must view the situation as if the government has lost its case.

"I'm not saying one way or the other whether we'll have a compulsory program even if the courts change the decision," he said. "That question is very much up in the air."

The entire heroin treatment program is under reassessment, Mair said, and its future is undecided. But he showed where his personal preference lies when he said: "My prejudice has swung from slightly in favor to slightly against."

The minister was unable to say what the entire program has cost the taxpayer so far.

He put the cost of operating the Brannen Lake centre at around $2 million this fiscal year and estimated it will have treated 120 to 125 patients during the year.

"That's not bad," he said.

The question of compulsory treatment for drug addicts goes before the B.C. Appeal Court in April. The court is expected to take several months making its decision.

Mair said the treatment centre is no "Club Med," as charged recently by a journalist who checked himself in to check the layout.

It does have a swimming pool and a gymnasium and some nice work areas, he said, "but it certainly is no luxury spot. Far from it."

The minister admitted, however, there isn't much the authorities can do to stop freeloaders who want a vacation at public expense.

Anyone asking for admission as a drug addict would have to spend a couple of weeks in isolation, watching TV while being watched by medical staff.

But after that they could enjoy six to eight weeks of swimming, boating and loafing before being discharged.

Mair rages at bribe-booze probe

Health Minister Rafe Mair is outraged at the possibility that he may have been the subject of an RCMP bribery investigation for two years without knowing about it.

The RCMP confirmed Wednesday an investigation has been under way for three years into allegations of kickbacks and political payoffs by distilleries and wineries in B.C.

The RCMP investigation has found no evidence that would lead to criminal charges, a spokesman for the attorney-general's ministry said Wednesday.

Mair, as minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, was responsible for the B.C. Liquor Board from November, 1976, until he left the portfolio in December, 1978.

"If the RCMP has investigated me or my ministry without giving me the opportunity of talking to them, without me knowing that investigations was taking place, then I am shocked and I think it is disgraceful," Mair said.

The minister said he had no knowledge of any allegations or investigation and "as far as I'm concerned the whole thing is a complete mystery."

If, while he was in charge, there had been any attempt by distilleries to buy preferred treatment for their products by making political donations, it could only have been done with his knowledge, Mair said.

"And that's a base lie. A falsehood. Absolutely no truth in it whatsoever," he said.

Mair also said he knows of no indiscretions by the body that makes all decisions regarding the listing of products in the province's liquor stores, the Liquor Board's listing committee.

"I have no reason to believe it wasn't completely above board," he said. "I heard no suggestion during the time I was minister of consumer and corporate affairs of anything wrong in that regard."

The present minister, Jim Nielsen, also denies any knowledge of either the allegations or the RCMP inquiry but called it "an extraordinarily serious matter" and referred questioners to Attorney-General Allan Williams.

Williams denied anything more than a general awareness that the RCMP was conducting a cross-country investigation into connections between distillers and politicians.

He stressed that the inquiry, triggered by a crime probe in Quebec, had nothing to do with him.

"It was undertaken as a national investigation by the RCMP as a federal force, not as a provincial force," he said.

"I have no knowledge of it. It's something which emanated from another province and the extent of it is something which is known only to the RCMP."

Supt. Bob Mollach, head of the RCMP commercial crime unit in Vancouver, said the B.C. investigation was originally requested by the attorney-general's ministry in Victoria following confidential reports of illegal practices in Quebec.

He also said the RCMP submitted a report on the B.C. situation to former Attorney-General Garde Gardom.

But Williams said he checked with Gardom and was told there was no provincial involvement and no such reports was received. Gardom himself was unavailable for direct comment.

The situation eventually was clarified when sources within the attorney-general's ministry revealed there had been contact with the RCMP at a sub-ministerial level.

The RCMP commercial crime unit was first alerted to the situation by a ministry official and later the RCMP sent a report to Associate Deputy Attorney-General Neil McDiarmid advising that the B.C. inquiry had failed to turn up anything to warrant the laying of charges.

The RCMP continued to keep the ministry informed as the probe progressed in other areas of the country, the sources said. That investigation culminated last month in bribery charges against 26 distilleries and wineries across Canada.

M-B earnings increase 53%

VANCOUVER (CP) — MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. announced Wednesday record earnings of $154.9 million or $7.03 a share in 1979, a 53.5-per-cent increase on the previous record earnings of $100.9 million or $4.50 a share in 1978.

The Vancouver-based forest company also reported record sales and other income of $2.2 billion for 1979, up $200 million on 1978 sales and income of $2 billion.

President Calvert Knudsen said the profit improvement primarily reflected stronger markets for almost all products.

In addition, the decline in the value of the Canadian dollar during the year contributed $4.3 million to net earnings, he said.

Knudsen said work stoppages at company operations in B.C. and New Brunswick last year cut earnings by an estimated $29.3 million or $1.38 a share.

He said the outlook for 1980 appears to be improving in step with the brightening U.S. economy.

"We expect continued strength in both volume and price in all pulp, paper and packaging product lines," he said.

The company also said that capital spending for expansion and productivity improvement reached a new one-year high of $280 million in 1979.

Rules eased for charters

OTTAWA (CP) — Air regulations were relaxed Wednesday to allow domestic and international charter services to become more competitive.

The new regulations, announced by the transport department in a news release, make it easier for passengers to book and alter reservations.

On domestic charters, airlines will be allowed to sell up to one-third of the seats without advance booking requirements. Passengers, however, would have to pay a late booking fee.

On domestic and international charters, passengers will be allowed to change reservations upon payment of a rebooking fee. A passenger would be able to postpone a departure and change his return flight, as long as minimum stay requirements were met.

Another change would allow passengers to book an overseas flight at least 21 days ahead of time, rather than 30 days ahead of time.

Children would be permitted to travel at reduced fares.

Charter carriers would be allowed to increase their revenues by carrying cargo and would also be allowed to serve up to four cities on on any one domestic charter flight.

Trudeau's leased wing clipped

WINNIPEG (CP) — Liberal Leader Pierre Trudeau's leased jet was damaged at the airport here today, forcing him to cancel an election meeting in southern Ontario.

A bus carrying reporters to the Air Canada DC-9 struck a wing tip. Trudeau was not on the plane at the time and there were no injuries.

The plane was to have flown Trudeau to London, Ont., for an event in nearby St. Thomas but the accident put the Trudeau campaign 2 12 hours behind schedule.

The former prime minister left for Windsor, Ont., by commercial flight. He had events scheduled in Chatham and Windsor for the rest of the day.

Some reporters and Trudeau aides were on the plane when it was hit by the bus and were immediately told to disembark.

New Pharmacare cards for elderly

New Pharmacare identification cards will be issued within the next week to 290,000 British Columbians over the age of 65, Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy said Wednesday.

She said the move is designed to update records and achieve closer control of the Pharmacare program.

The new green cards become effective immediately.

McCarthy said the old blue cards will be honored by pharmacies until March 15.

Those who do not have their replacement cards by that date can apply for a new card at any pharmacy in the province.

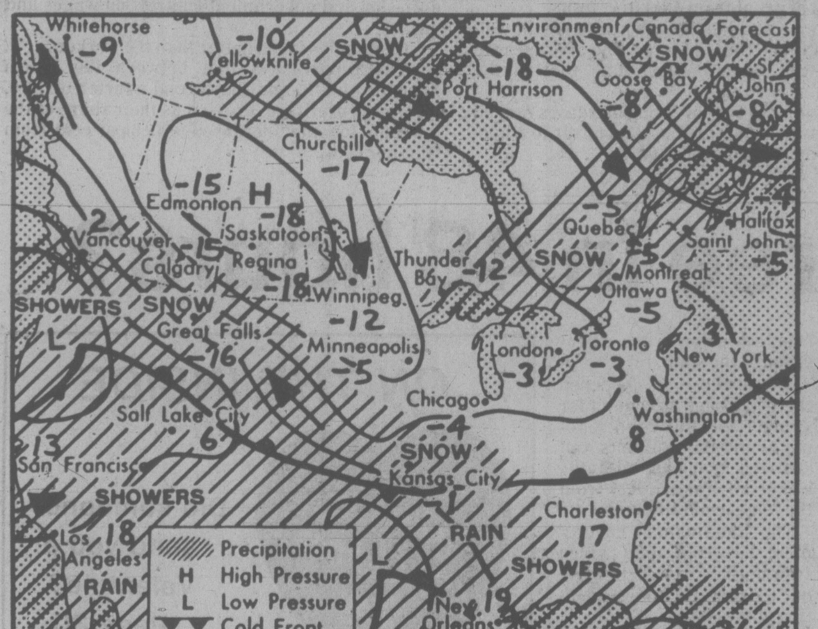

Map valid until midday Friday

A weak disturbance drifting slowly northwards through the western United States was responsible for patches of cloud over extreme southern B.C. during Wednesday night. Elsewhere skies were clear and temperatures cold as a ridge of high pressure dominated. Increased cloud is forecast for southern regions as the disturbance continues a slow trek northward today and Friday. Little change from the present pattern is expected for the northern and central areas of the province as the cold high pressure ridge is forecast to hold its ground.

Pierre Elliott Houdini breaks out of a sleep

VANCOUVER — Pierre Trudeau is like an old horse who smells the oats in the barn.

With victory in sight, he is snorting just a bit and actually coming up off his heels just as if there is some adrenalin left in the heart after all.

On a balmy Vancouver February day, with the roller skates and the T-shirts out, the sleepwalker who has been masquerading as a politician finally woke up long enough to show us some of the old curve.

There seems to be something about the bookends of the nation that convinces a 60-year-old recycled leader to unwind. The extremities of the nation, as it were. The Newfs and the Goofs.

The last time Pierre Trudeau took the chastity belt off his passion was in St. John's a month ago when the irreverent students at Memorial University provoked him to high moments of Liberal propaganda.

This time, the prod that provoked Pierre Elliott Houdini back into life was another golden oldie, a fellow near-pensioner called Jack Webster.

The quadrennial jousts between the realm's richest mouth and the country's most adroit obfuscator are a highlight of election campaigns in British Columbia.

Trudeau, who can skate with Barbara Ann Scott, waltzed for an hour and emerged without a serious bruise, relying mainly on his time-tested style of aggressive professorial rewriting of history.

Once again, the old gifts were brought out for display in the face of the growl of Haggis McBagpipe; the bland academic reference with hints of further obscurity to come; consistent refusal to concede a single mistake (levelling the Rockies); elaborate justification of indefensible points — as if a doctoral board was assessing philosophically opposing debating skills.

Said Trudeau, "I don't trust the polls"— the ones that have him ahead by the length of a pasture.

It is, (naturally), delightful codswallop.

Lurking about the fringes of the TV studio, walking without stooping under cameras is his midget Svengali, Jimmy Coutts, whose Goldfarb polling convinced a pre-Dec. 13th Trudeau that they could win an election by bringing down the government.

Whether emboldened either by the early-morning encounter with the wrath of Webster, or by the air that smelled like a day in May, Trudeau arrived at noon at a major Liberal rally in the stately hotel Vancouver where the warm-up swing band with the big sound played the Pink Panther.

It was not clear whether this was meant as editorial comment on his campaign style, but the audience — at the core of the Vancouver Centre riding which is the only constituency north of San Francisco where the gay community (3,000 votes) can decide a victory — lived up to its reputation.

This is the city where he found a wife but which he has never understood: A lady pensioner in her Adidas jogging suit pranced in the aisle as a spavined gent paraded in his Liberal T-shirt and the nut fringe from the Groucho Marxist set distributed pamphlets while the band did its Jimmy Dorsey imitation in line with the new sedate 1980 brand of Trudeau campaigning.

Instead, Pacific air in his nostrils, he dredged up a touch of the 1968 and 1974 Trudeau.

He did the ever popular bit of bashing the Vancouver papers (both of which have declared for Clark, as has every declared major paper except the Toronto Star).

He bashed Levesque, he bashed Lougheed, he bashed most of all the dreary image determined for himself so far by Coutts and the rest of the Edgar Bergens hidden inside the Liberal computer.

Did they let him out of the barn or did he escape? Who knows?

All we know is that he threw away his speech which reads like the Etobicoke phone book, and laced out with more than a modicum of the passion of old.

His eyes flashed, his voice soared about the decibel level programmed by his packagers.

With the oats ahead, the old nag is slipping into a trot.

McKitka bonanza bid taped

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Former Surrey mayor Ed McKitka once asked a real estate agent to try to buy a chicken farm for him after the owner came to him for zoning information, B.C. Supreme Court was told Wednesday.

Conversations secretly recorded in 1977 by the RCMP suggested that McKitka expected to make about $100,000 if he been able to buy the 15 acres still owned by chicken farmer Peter Baas and if the land were taken out of the agricultural land freeze and rezoned for residential use.

McKitka faces nine charges, including one of committing a breach of trust as mayor by misleading Baas as to the use and value of his land and by endeavoring to obtain the property for himself for personal profit. His jury trial began Wednesday after lawyers spent two days arguing about the admissibility of wiretap evidence.

McKitka, now a Surrey alderman, was mayor from 1975 to 1977. For more than a year during that time, the RCMP bugged his office at Surrey Municipal Hall and tapped his phone line.

When Baas and his wife visited McKitka, the mayor suggested in a conversation recorded June 28, 1977, that they would get about $10,000 an acre for their farm. He also hinted that it could end up as a park "and you'll get nothing for it."

Under cross-examination by defence lawyer John Richardson, Baas agreed that later during the June 28 conversation he estimated that his property would sell for about $10,000 an acre.

In an exchange taped June 29, 1977, in his office, McKitka asked real estate agent Russell Wicks to put an option on the chicken farm for him.

Wicks was unable to attend the trial Wednesday because of illness but his testimony from a preliminary hearing was read into the record.

In that testimony, Wicks said he recognized his voice but didn't remember any of the discussion.

In the same taped conversation, Wicks complained about his treatment by his real estate agency's landlords. McKitka told Wicks that he would make things difficult for the landlords, and also shared some confidential information with the realtor about a plan for a town core, linking Guildford to Whalley.

McKitka instructed Wicks to offer a maximum of $150,000 for the chicken farm, which was bordered by land already zoned for residential use.

On July 12, McKitka met land developer Joe Beck in his office. In the bugged conversation, McKitka told Beck: "I've got a guy who'll buy it right now for $30,000 an acre over in Delta, so 15 acres, we can make a couple hundred thousand bucks."

Later in the taped discussion, McKitka told Beck that a $25,000 down payment was needed, and said: "But I have to use your name."

Beck: "Okay."

McKitka: "You got to put up the twenty-five."

McKitka told Beck he did not anticipate difficulty in getting the chicken farm out of the agricultural land reserve.

Jakubowski holds deportation notice

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Polish seaman who has failed to win refugee status in Canada after trying for two years says he can't understand why two Russian shipjumpers are being given special treatment by federal authorities.

Tadeusz Jakubowski plans a final appeal in federal court against immigration department rulings that he doesn't qualify as a political refugee.

If he fails, he said, he must leave by the end of the month or face deportation and possible jail in his native land because of his opposition to the Communist system.

But he also said he is puzzled that he finds himself in this predicament when a Russian couple who jumped ship here two weeks ago because they are in love have already been granted ministerial permits allowing them to stay and work while their applications for refugee status are processed.

The Russian couple, Alexander Ryagozov, 33,, and Yelina Terekhova, 22, said they defected to the West mainly because of their love for each other.

Jakubowski walked off his Polish factory ship here in October, 1977.

If he fails to gain status, he must leave Canada voluntarily by midnight Feb. 28. If he doesn't leave then he will be arrested and deported.

Since his defection, Jakubowski has had help from Vancouver's Polish community and works as a cleanup man with Canada Packers, which wants to give him a permanent job.

The immigration departmen says Jakubowski does not qualify as a refugee because his case does not involve "extreme humantarian reasons" or "persecution."

Jabkubowski said he first ran into trouble with the Communist system when he took part in food riots in 1970.

Roe price studied

VANCOUVER (CP) — Herring price negotiations adjourned Wednesday after one meeting to allow fishing company officials to study the unsettled Japanese roe market.

The United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union presented its initial demands to the Fisheries Association of B.C., the companies' bargaining agent, and Feb. 27 was tentatively set as the date negotiations will resume.

Accept them as they are

The final decision of the International Olympic Committee to maintain Moscow as the site of this year's Summer Games and the international reaction to that decision should prove one thing for once and for all.

Politics and sports can mix, do mix, and already are so inextricably intertwined in the Olympics that there isn't a chance of separating them in today's world.

They mix because governments from all parts of the political spectrum use and have used the Olympics for political gain, both on the wide international stage and at home domestically.

The Soviets are using the Olympics to display their country (at least the parts they want the tourists to see) as a showplace. The boycotts, if they proceed, will be used by the Soviet leaders as further evidence to their citizens that the capitalist nations are untrustworthy, and are determined enemies of the Soviet Union.

The American and Canadian governments also are using the Olympics for domestic political gain. President Carter discovered weeks ago that a tough stance against the Soviet Union is extremely popular with U.S. citizens, and the Olympics make a perfect focus.

Now Prime Minister Joe Clark has discovered the same thing. Commie-bashing speeches may be the miracle he apparently needs to be re-elected on Monday.

The cynical scenario now being predicted is that events in the next few months will unfold in such a way that all sides will benefit politically.

According to that scenario, the Soviets will not withdraw completely from Afghanistan because that would mean losing international face. They will, however, reduce the number of troops in the country to such an extent that the U.S. and its allies, including Canada will be able to re-think their position on the boycott.

The U.S. and Canadian governments will gain credit for having been tough enough to force the Soviets to back down. And the Soviets will be able to display their showplace according to plan.

If the scenario comes to pass, it will be a masterful piece of political pettifoggery.

Regardless of the outcome, no one today can seriously believe that politics and sport aren't mixed.

Indeed the mix started long ago when various countries began to decide that the national flory of winning at the games was worth the cost to the nation. As a result, the true spirit of Olympic competition — amateur meeting amateur — was lost. Many countries now approach the games on a deeply nationalistic level, sending athletes who are virtual professionals, paid by the state, trained by state coaches, and, in too many cases, treated with drugs to enhance their performance without regard to their health.

The current controversy over the Moscow Games will have served a useful purpose if it causes nations to examine realistically the contradictions and motivations inherent in the modern Olympics.

The world might be left with two choices.

It could abandon the idea of the games altogether.

Or it could accept them as they are — as a part of world and domestic politics, performed for the glory of nations as well as the glory of athletes, and thus unable to exist without the conflicts of world and domestic politics.

If the second choice is made, some changes could be made in the Games' format. A permanent site could be chosen, for example, and every nation could enter its best athletes — amateur, semi-professional or professional.

At least the present sham would be ended. And all nations and athletes would be at the same starting line in the Olympics.

Written decisions

Saanich council should reconsider its decision not change the way the Board of Variance operates. Unless council acts, the current practice of making end runs around the board's decisions will continue, eroding and demeaning the board's important role.

The Board of Variance acts as an appeal body for property owners who run into conflict with zoning bylaws. The board deals mainly with set-backs, or how far a building or addition can be constructed from the property line.

But the problem with the five-person panel, made up of provincial and municipal appointees, is that it gives no reasons for its decisions. Residents receive a simple yes or no to their appeal.

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier is right in insisting that such a response is not good enough in today's society and that a person is entitled to know that his arguments have been heard and understood. But council felt otherwise and defeated a motion that would have required the board to hand down written decisions.

Property owners who believe their cases have not been given proper treatment can make further appeals to council, as happened recently when a Cedarwood Street resident's plan to enlarge his porch was rejected by the board. Council, like the resident, had no idea why the Board of Variance rejected the project and it issued a development permit so the man could build the porch.

The Board of Variance provides a vital function in the arbitration of zoning matters. Without it, valuable council time would be taken up dealing with dozens of these local and relatively trivial matters.

But by issuing development permits to circumvent the board, council is jeopardizing the board's very existance. Requiring the board to give reasons for its decisions would seem the most logical way to overcome this conflict.

The NDP rises with its star

TORONTO — Even after allowing for the fact that words fall as easily from Bob Rae's lips as does his cowlick from his forehead, and for the fact that that you have to expect a warmup speaker to lay it on as thickly as he can, still Rae's choice of words was revealing.

"This election is about trust," said the Toronto MP at the start of the NDP's "Bandwagon" rally at Massey Hall. A pause, and then he began his cadence. "It's about honesty. . . . It's about consistency."

An interruption here, from an old geezer who'd wandered in, unsteadily, to the back of the hall and who shouted out something that sounded like "Whoa." Unruffled, Rae added the line, "And it's about humor." The audience applauded his inventiveness.

Leadership pushed

Rae went back to his refrain. "It's about reliability. . . . It's about decency. A longer pause this time, before the punch-line. "And it's about Ed Broadbent." A standing ovation.

The point being that, even after allowing for political hype, as you have to do, most of those descriptive nouns do fit Ed Broadbent pretty well.

Among the more comforting of the illusions with which the NDP wraps itself against the chill of being always in political exile, is its conviction that it is uniquely a party that lives by ideas, by policies and by programs. Hence its nose-in-the-air note of moral superiority.

In fact, almost as much as do the Liberals and Conservatives, the NDP always has lived by its leaders. They've been, quite strikingly so for so small a party, an uncommon lot: J. S. Woodsworth, J. J. Coldwell, Tommy Douglas, David Lewis.

Until about a year ago, Broadbent seemed to be cast from a different mould. A flatter one. He was brainy all right, and diligent, and dogged, but he left few traces of his presence, in Parliament, in the party (which kept one eye on Saskatchewan Premier Allan Blakeney, and the other on former Ontario Leader Stephen Lewis), or, least of all, among the public.

The 1979 election changed all that. Broadbent won only a few more votes, and not that many more MPs but he won, easily, the post-election ratings for the best campaign. The current Gallup Poll reports that 21 per cent of voters rate Broadbent the best leader of the three, double the proportion of a year ago, and the highest any NDP leader ever has reached.

To this transformation, what Broadbent says, about ideas, policies, programs, makes little difference. His audience applauds dutifully when he's being worthy — "A fair system of taxation;" "A made-in-Canada industrial strategy." As dutifully, they look the other way when Broadbent is being wooly, as when he pledges a "full stop" to the export of energy resources without mentioning that among those that would have to be stopped are the uranium and heavy oil that Saskatchewan's Blakeney is exporting as fast as he can.

Instead, what Broadbent is makes all the difference. He's become Honest Ed in a political supermarket where few voters any longer trust any of the goods on the shelves, including the ones marked up by the NDP. (Depending upon which figures you believe, or can make sense of, NDP promises in this campaign might cost $1.3 billion, or might cost $3.4 billion, or might cost anything in between).

Rejection process

In the last election, many voters turned to Joe Clark only in order to get away from Pierre Trudeau. In this election, apparently, many voters will turn back to Trudeau only in order to get away from Clark. The consistency to this process is that each time voters turn their heads, more and more find themselves half-way around, looking at Broadbent.

Probably the NDP will win another half-dozen seats in the west, although in Ontario, as the half-filled Massey Hall showed, it will do well to hang on to what it now has. The party should win proportionately more votes, although not, as the polls show, that many more. All this is for today. For tomorrow, the NDP has won itself a bigger prize — a leader cast from the same mould as Woodsworth, Caldwell, Douglas, Lewis. Watch him, and because of him, the NDP, although the party likes to think things are the other way around, will grow.

No contest

After reading the correspondence about Trident Aircraft Ltd. which has been appearing in your newspaper recently, I cannot help feeling that the essential point of the situation as it now stands is being missed.

That point is surely: do we want an aircraft industry on the Saanich Peninsula? And surely the answer has to be a resounding yes.

The debate about whether Trigull itself is the right aircraft, although naturally important, is nevertheless not the sole issue. The establishment of a west coast aircraft manufacturing plant, with its eventual highly lucrative spin-offs of spare parts and other related byproducts, is surely the goal to be achieved.

The plant is situated near the major airport serving the region; it is a high technology project, bringing skilled workers into B.C. and providing a worthwhile new industry. It is not encroaching on our important agricultural land on the peninsula, yet it would bring an annual payroll of $6 million and 270 workers in the area.

To the question, "Do you want your tax dollars spent on this project?" I would say that the ultimate gains to Vancouver Island as a whole and to the entire province are hard to deny.

Seattle is ready to absorb as much of Trident's staff as are ready to go. If it is a choice between my tax dollars going to the grandiose futility of B.C. Place or to establishing what Bob Cameron, federal NDP candidate for Esquimalt-Saanich, has called the basis for a new future on the peninsula, then to me there's no contest. — Tom Doyle, 2181 Amherst Avenue.

Fish hatchery

We now have the support of the regional board, the mayors of Duncan and North Cowichan, the Chamber of Commerce and a group of sport fishermen in Cowichan Bay in promoting a fish hatchery to ensure that our Chinook salmon are not wiped out in the next few years.

At a recent meeting at the Regional Board, chaired by Martin Lukaitus, we were told by Dennis Brock of the Federal Fisheries that the Cowichan River was a low priority for a hatchery. His reason was that the federal fisheries didn't want to produce more fish so they could use that as a lever to get a better deal with the American fisheries. Sixty-five per cent of the fish from the Cowichan River are taken by Americans.

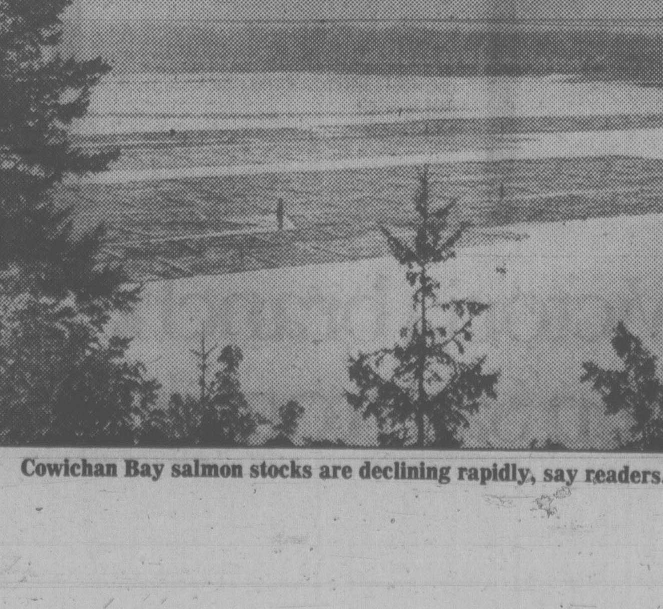
We have watched the salmon steadily decrease in the Cowichan Bay almost to the point of extinction. We have watched the seals steadily increase to 70-100 in the river mouth as well as some California sea lions.

Nobody really knows how many fish they kill. Michael Bigg, of the Biological Research Station, Nanaimo states that they eat only six pounds of fish per day. Even if that is true and we take only 74 seals which is the actual count of seals sited on several occasions — that makes 444 lbs. of fish per day. They remain in this area about 90 days which is 39,960 lbs. or 20 tons of fish.

If they only eat six pounds but kill a 20-pound fish, what they actually eat has little bearing on the fact.

As well, at the Mill Stream creek where some of the school students and private citizens are spending their own time and money to hatch and release coho salmon, there were over 40 seals counted on the rocks at the mouth of the Mill Stream on several occasions. Some of them got into the salmon holding area of the project and killed many of the spawning salmon.

The people of the Cowichan Valley and lower Vancouver Island are tired of all the excuses and are not going to be satisfied with anything less than a major salmon enhancement program now. — Ralph E. Saulsgiver, Cobble Hill; Lloyd Newcomb, Cobble Hill; and Richard Cooper, Crofton.



Cowichan Bay salmon stocks are declining rapidly, say readers.

Trident replies

Re: Mr. Gillespie's letter to the editor of Jan. 30:

The ownership of Trident Aircraft is made up primarily of a group of Canadian businessmen of high reputation whom people conveniently forget have put in literally millions of their own money. Trident's 130 shareholders also include a number of employees and ex-employees.

In answer to the design questions, these are my comments as expressed to the B.C. Development Corportion in response to a similar letter by Mr. Gillespie in July:

"His notion that millions of taxpayers dollars will go down the drain if the Trigull is unsuccessful displays an alarming lack of knowledge of basic economic fact. Taxpayers' dollars do not go down the drain even if a manufacturing company is unsuccessful because the dollars will have been spent mainly for salaries and wages and thus have improved the quality of life for the citizens. . . Redistribution of tax funds on a better basis than by creating jobs cannot be conceived."

"I don't believe that it can be categorically stated that any pusher results in a 20 per cent drop in propeller efficiency (the pusher on the Cessna 337 is a proven exception), but in any event there are many other reasons for a pusher propeller, one of which is the ability to keep it out of the spray pattern while maintaining a minimum aerodynamic frontal area.

Mr. Gillespie's remarks with respect to undercarriage geometry seem to be concerned with strength. The Trigull undercarriage and wing have been thoroughly tested, reviewed by government experts and have proven to be adequate.

Mr. Gillespie's remarks with respect to a fluted hull bottom may be correct but any slight increase in performance potential must be weighed against the additional weight and complication of manufacture. Trigull does not need additional directional stability on the water, as implied.

When Mr. Gillespie compares the Trigull with the Seabee, he displays his lack of knowledge of the performance differences. Even the original Trigull had takeoff performance which compared very well with the Bonanza, the most popular single engine airplane of all time.

Mr. Gillespie's opinion that wheels that hang down from the wings are categorically weak cannot be substantiated. Again, the experts have endorsed the airplane and there is no evidence of any weakness in our landing gear structural system. The wing strut that he suggests would serve no purpose other than to slow the airplane down at cruise and this is an undesirable feature.

"The basis for Mr. Gillespie's comment that there is no commercial market for this aircraft seems to be questionable at best. In any event, I doubt that anyone has ever claimed that our market will be commercial. In fact, I am on record that 80 per cent of our product would go to owner-pilots, making it much closer to a consumer goods than a commercial goods." — J. C. Vavarek, Chief Executive Officer, Trident Aircraft Ltd.

Trees destroyed

I wish to protest the destruction of the trees at the north end of Elk Lake in Saanich. According to the parks supervisor, the reason for removing the beautiful trees that grew at the edge of the water were that a couple of branches had fallen. Following this logic, all trees everywhere should be cut down. As a Saanich resident who lives near the lake, one of my little pleasures in life was sitting under the shade of these trees by the water on hot summer days. No longer will I have this enjoyment.

Ever since the Capital Regional District has taken over administration of Elk-Beaver Lake Park (without the residents of Saanich being asked if they wanted the CRD control, I might add) the trees at the north end of the lake are being cut down. There does not appear to be any logical reason for this action. Possibly there are too many employees and this destruction gives them something to occupy their time. When Saanich controlled the park, there was no noticeable tree cutting. Nobody asks the residents in the area if they wanted this despoliation of nature; the CRD shoots first and doesn't ask questions later. Under the present policy, I would assume there will be no trees left at the north end of the lake in a few years and it will become another barren field. Before the trees were cut down, this beach was the only one that I know of that had large trees at the water's edge. It was beautiful, but not anymore. — Roger Wigmore, 5474 Fowler Road.

Good cause

I'm 63 years old and receive a disability pension from Ottawa and a supplementary amount from the provincial government. I recently received an increment to my disability pension from Ottawa which I assume was to compensate for the increase in the cost of living. My cheque from the B.C. goverment was reduced from $109 to $94. My question is this: if the disability pension has been unchanged and the increment is only to cover the increase in the cost of living, why can't the provincial government do the same? True, it may decrease the budget surplus slightly but would it not be for a good cause? — Leslie A. Priestley, 5—1321 Broad Street.

What's wrong?

Many statements have been made during this election, but perhaps none as mystifying as the ones which dismiss out of hand voting for the NDP.

It is significant that in their rejection of the NDP as a viable alternative, these people never criticize Ed Broadbent as untrustworthy or incompetent. In fact Mr. Broadbent has the highest appeal amongst the electorate in credibility and integrity. His problem: they say he leads the wrong party.

What's wrong with the party? Nobody argues against having an industrial strategy for this country. Nor against Petro-Can. Nor against multinationals paying the same taxes you and I do. Nor against affordable interest rates. Not even Joe Clark . . . now. So it seems the only thing wrong with the NDP is that they haven't been elected. Yet. — Nancy Laprise, 7-1244 Balmoral Road.

Too tough

I am beginning to grow weary of the political opportunism exhibited by External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald, regarding the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan. Having discovered that a tough, anti-Soviet stance is popular with the electorate, Miss MacDonald spouts statements that would suggest we were already at war. Granted that the action in Afghanistan must be deplored, Flora goes beyond the bounds of responsibility when she says, "Russians are not the sort of people Canadians should associate with . . . there should be no exchange programs with the Soviet Union because it represents a culture that Canadians should not go along with."

By making such broad generalizations she does nothing to enhance her credibility as a politician. Is she saying that there is nothing admirable in such aspects of Soviet culture as the Bolshoi Ballet?

Political opportunism is again evident in the decision of immigration minister Ron Atkey to grant asylum to a Russian cargo officer and his girlfriend. It would seem that Alexander Ryaguzof was unhappy with the wife he left behind in Russia and decided that he and his young girlfriend would be happier in Vancouver, his "favorite city". A good enough reason to be granted asylum? On the same day comes a story from Toronto of an East Indian woman, abandoned by her landed immigrant husband, who was forcibly removed from the hospital in which she was staying, in order that she could be deported. Had she been Russian perhaps her treatment would have been different. — Peter Smith, 4630 West Saanich Road.

Inflation problems

A few years ago, the lowest income-receiving segment of Canadian society received more than four per cent of the total income; it now receives much less. So the process of concentrating wealth continues to enrich the wealthy at the expense of the poor. The practice constitutes our basic social unjustice, and inhuman sin, besides being economic folly.

For at least 25 years, annual reports of Canada's major corporations have been showing repeated record profits, in the face of an increasing unemployment rate, and a growing disparity between the upper and lower segments of society respecting income. The most flagrant concentration has occurred in the 1970s at the time of the greatest inflation. Has it not occurred also because of the inflation? Inflation is itself the unbalanced increase in prices, the higher interest rates, the profit-taking in the marketplace, etc.

Takeovers, mergers, consolidations and corporate tax concessions have been the order of the day. These have occurred both within industries and across them. An increasing aspect of this consolidation is diversification of industrial holdings within a corporation. The maw's capacity is enlarging.

With the continued threat of such concentration producing so much social strain, and, in its international aspects, creating a growing spread between the have and the have-not nations, we must expect to face more tensions in the industrial scene and in international problems.

With these circumstances and conditions, the Conservative and Liberal parties have been content to accommodate themselves. Indeed, their policies have helped produce them.

It is time the voters used their voting power to start to free themselves from such conditions. The New Democratic Party's proposals are designed to apply to these matters, and a vote for that party's candidate will be a substantial move in that direction. — Harold T. Allen, 2140 Kings Road.

Address inflation

All parties agree that one of our greatest ecomomic problems is inflation but, like the weather, it is mostly talk with no effective action taken to do anything about it. I have no specific solution to offer either but to suggest that if a small fraction of the brain and computer power used to send men to the moon were applied to pressing problems nearer home, it would long since have been solved.

As a starter, a comprehensive comparison of the various economic systems might indicate where the strengths and weaknesses of each are to be found. For instance, if the present so-called free enterprise economy is retained, it seems to me that depressions can be cured but the price is prohibitively high as those who went through the thirties can recollect. It is doubtful if the present generation would put up with such misery, so we had better do something about inflation before it is allowed to bring on still greater trouble.

Another point to be investigated could be the effect of high interest rates and to what extent they can be blamed for rising prices. It might be that it is not so much the rate itself as it is the ever-mounting public debt outstanding and the fact that most redemptions are made by still greater borrowing or the printing of more dollars. Perhaps the biblical prophets had something when they condemned the charging of interest as wicked.

One villain in the piece may be the indexing of salaries, pensions, income tax exemptions, etc. This could make us careless in our attitude towards advancing prices and this give them an added upward push. I can imagine the screams of anguish (mine included) if such were cancelled, but the matter is at least worth investigation.

Another danger may be the trend towards more and more falling into fewer hands. As examples are the recent takeover of some fine papers by another newspaper chain and the bringing together of The Bay, Simpsons-Sears and Zellers under the same ownership. Actually we are no longer under a free enterprise system.

Perhaps the greatest danger lies in the fact that psychologically we have come to accept inflation as a fact of life and are overjoyed when we go to the store and find that canned beans are the same price as last week. My plea to all parties is that they no longer rest content with condemning inflation but promise to have the problem investigated with the seriousness and thoroughness it deserves. — F. L. P. Anderson, 409-2174 Cadboro Bay Road.

Narrow-minded

A headline in the Victoria Times of Feb. 6 reads "Flora claws Soviets over Afghanistan," and then goes on to quote the good lady in one of the most bigoted, narrow-minded, and arrogant statements ever uttered by the head of a government department.

External Affairs Minister Flora Macdonald says the Russians are not the sort of people Canadians should associate with. She says there should be no more exchange programs because the Soviet Union represents a culture that Canadians should not go along with. In my opinion it ill behooves a country of 28 million which depends on exports for its lifeblood to tell a nation of 256 million covering one-sixth of the world's land mass that they are not fit to associate with.

The Tories have been in power just seven months, but during that brief period this country has insulted and derided nations weak as well as strong. Flora Macdonald has been the mouthpiece for this government and her actions and her tirades against Third World and Asian nations weakened by war and hunger make a decent Canadian cringe. In her maiden speech to the United Nations she warned that Canada was cutting back sharply on aid to the under-developed countries. Unless they have something of value to trade with us, they were in the cold.

Flora MacDonald parrots the U.S. state department over lack of human rights in the Soviet Union. What a hullabaloo over a handful of dissidents who disagree with their government, but never a word about the tens of thousands of dissidents who fled their American homeland because they could not condone the war in Vietnam.

We as a nation cannot afford the Tory-Clark-Macdonald foreign policy. We cannot afford it economically, and we cannot afford it when nuclear war is the end result of escalating hatred and dissention.

Canada once had an enviable reputation amongst the nations as an independent, respected and generous country. If the Tories are returned to power on Feb. 18, that reputation will continue to go down the drain. I, for one, will bitterly resent having Canada known as the lapdog of the big country to the south of us. — Agnes Turcott, Sooke.

Secret ballot

Comes another election. And soon come the telephone calls from eager party workers offering rides to the polls, giving election reminders and goodness knows all what.

Actually accepting or declining the proffered ride, or thanking callers for the reminder are no problem, but sometimes the magnanimous caller skillfully slips in a question which — for all intents and purposes — nullifies the secret ballot. Sometimes this is done smoothly, with an after-thought-type inflection in the voice: "Can we count on your support?" Sometimes it is bluntly stated: "Which way are you going to vote?"

Taking a mini-poll from a list of known party supporters, for whatever reason, is fair enough. So is a no-name poll taken on the street, but making one up from a list of names, be it telephone book or otherwise, to present to the party hierarchy is contemptuous. Where is the secrecy?

Anyone asked such an unprincipled question is under no obligation to answer, and should tell the caller so in the strongest possible manner. If we are going to operate on the secret ballot let's keep it secret. If not, we may as well meet in the marketplace and vote by a show of hands. — Blaire McKenzie, 101-516 Gorge Road West.

Headline surplus

I find it rather peculiar that you would headline the replacing of the Princess Marguerite by the Queen of Prince Rupert rather than the announcement that Canada had a trade surplus for 1979 of $4.1 billion dollars.

This is good news for all Canadians and surely warrants more than a small column on the front page.

It admittedly does not say much for Finance Minister John Crosbie, who forecast a surplus of only $2.1 billion for the year 1979. — Richard Brown, 2651 Cameron-Taggart Road, Cobble Hill.

Draft: 'A call to death'

By JOANNE EGLASH

(A former editor of the University of California at Los Angeles Daily Bruin, Eglash now works for a television production company in Los Angeles.)

I once read that the manner in which one reacts to a crisis shows one's true nature. America now finds itself in a potentialy apocalyptic situation, and the responses from both the public and the politicians terrify me.

As I listened to President Carter's State of the Union address recently, one phrase beat incessantly in my mind: History repeats itself. The call to a draft is a call to death.

Already the states united have become the people divided over the question of the possible reinstitution of the draft. It's a pity that, like the Olympics, we cannot postpone or boycott the elections. For in these confusing times, nearly every politician's stance turns into a public-relations game.

What appalls me most is the commentary from the affected generation: the 18- to 26-year-olds. At 22, I am in the group that Carter may use as cannon fodder in the Defence Against the Bad Guys. And I cannot believe many of the comments that I hear from my peers. Certain attitudes are commonplace:

"Yeah, we should go, because we have to defend this world against communism." That stance is part of the communism-as-reason-for-all-the-world's-ills approach. Upset about inflation, gas prices, lack of leadership? Here's a good scapegoat to rally against. Communism is a stimulus word, releasing ragged emotions in many people. It does not matter that communism, as a concept, is not responsible for world hunger, does not kill babies, is not an ultimate destroyer of land and lives. What matters is that people can band together behind a common hatred.

Another perception, from someone I considered an intelligent 20-year-old: "The draft is the least important part of war. We should draft as large a force as possible, because what's important is threatening Russia with enormous armies." If we choose to care about human lives, I think the draft should rate high on our list of national concerns.

The United States seems headed for a repetition of Vietnam, of lining up the young bodies in the country and shipping them overseas to be slaughtered like so many cattle.

And a final choice observation: "I think we should mobilize as fast as possible. This country stands for freedom, and we should go over there and fight for freedom." Again, like communism, that young man picks out such great abstracts as "freedom" and "over there" to convince himself of the absolute righteousness of the cause. Why bother investigating such alternatives as expanding economic boycotts and exploring energy options? Let us haul out the nuclear weapons and manpower (and now, it seems, womanpower) pronto.

Before we do, however, I ask that we listen to the Vietnam veterans who survived, to the historians who observed, to the TV news footage of the horrors and the indignities and the losses of our last "fight for freedom." I do not think it takes much time to listen, to sort through the mental album of pictures that we can never lose from that period: the children burning from napalm, the destruction of entire populations.

Being loved . . . anyway

From time to time, my Uncle Mike likes to pass on the wisdom of one generation to another. In his own fashion.

On the subject of enduring love, for example, he and my aunt are role models of believability. They like each other. They have a good time together. And they have managed it for roughly 41 years.

So, when someone asks him the secret, he is more than willing to share the fact that he modelled his own success on his father's.

"My father would get up in the morning, look in the mirror and say, 'You're no bargain.'"

This, I think, would make a hell of a Valentine.

Maybe I'm just tired of people who pick at each other's imperfections like pimples. Maybe I know too many people trying to figure out if their mate is living up to expectations. Maybe I've met too many "6"s who think they are slumming with anything less than a "10". But I think he is on to something.

If you start your day looking your own flaws in the face, you might work up a pretty good appetite of gratitude before breakfast. If you know you're no bargain in the morning, by evening you could be atwitter with appreciation for someone who actually loves you anyway.

From my own, not particularly vast, experience, and my uncle's advice, it seems that this is the glue of any long-term attachment: Being Loved Anyway.

There are at least two ingredients to the sticky stuff: (1) you have to know your own worst, and (2) you have to find someone who also knows it, but doesn't think it's all that awful. Being Loved Anyway, you see, is not being regarded as perfect but being accepted as imperfect.

I don't suppose that sounds very romantic. Other people may want sonnets to their perfection and flowers for their pedestal. They may want doilies of adoration.

But frankly, adoration would make me nervous. I'd keep waiting to be discovered.

I have a friend who got involved with a man who was in awe of her. It was outrageously flattering — for about three months. The problem was, she said, she couldn't yell at her children in front of him. The problem was, she had to keep washing her hair. She simply couldn't live up to it.

To this day, she refuses to trust the durability of any relationship in which she is still regularly shaving her legs.

I have another friend who, as they say in the shrink trade, has difficulty getting close. He is sure that someone will find out that his heart of darkness is made of mud, rather than chocolate.

But because he never lets anyone in, he never trusts anyone in love with him, since, by definition, she doesn't know him, because if she did know him, she would reject him. You get the picture.

If there is a constant in life, it must be the human fear of being unlovable. In a recent interview, Phil Donahue was asked for the fourth time what he wanted from love and sighed, finally, "Sometimes I think I invented insecurity." Baloney.

Insecurity was invented by the first kid who was caught being bad and asked his mother, "Do you love me anyway?"

The kid lives in all of us. The kid who is sure she won't be loved if she is bad. This kid is the one making the decision every day between the safety of hiding and the risk of discovery and the security of Being Loved Anyway.

I suppose it cuts both ways. We can't trust our own feelings for someone else until we've been "dis-illusioned," embarrassed, hurt a time or two — and have come out caring.

Now I don't want to make this negative. We shouldn't send all our Valentines to those who love us at our worst. Or those whose worst we love. I know people who have been loved for their weaknesses and hated for their strengths, and it was perfectly dreadful.

We are told that people stay in love because of chemistry, or because they remain intrigued with each other, because of many kindnesses, because of luck. I also suspect that laughing together is vastly underrated.

But part of it has got to be forgiveness and gratefulness. The understanding that, so, you're no bargain, but you love and you are loved. Anyway.

Uneasy crowns in Mideast

By CLAYTON FRITCHEY
Newsday

The new president of Iran, Abolhassan Bani Sadr, has just put his finger on a clear and present danger that could, in the end, create more difficulties for the United States than the uncertain threat of outright Soviet military aggression in the area.

With attention in the United States focused on what Bani Sadr had to say at his inauguration about the American hostages, little notice was paid to his quiet, but ominous warning that "our revolution will not win unless it is exported." And he added: "We are going to create a new world order in which deprived people will not always be deprived, and oppressors will not always be oppressors."

He made it plain that he was talking about "destroying the remains of monarchy." Those are alarming words to the dynastic rulers of the Arabian Peninsula, for that oil-rich zone is the world's last stronghold of absolute monarchs who still reign as if 1980 was in the Middle Ages.

It is not surprising that the sultans, sheiks and kings, who have become the wealthiest men on earth through their control of trillions of dollars of petroleum, are already nervous and fearful over the shape of things to come, since what happened to the Shah of Iran can also happen to them.

It is a sound bet that, like dominoes, most of them will fall before the end of the century, if not much sooner. In this day and age, they are anachronisms, and natural targets for revolution, insurrection and assorted coups.

As Iran has shown, such a train of events could pose acute problems for the United States, for it is impossible to foresee what the political consequences will be or how they will affect our supply of oil, on which we now depend so much. The Iranian experience suggests the oil flow would be gravely jeopardized.

The biggest potential domino, of course, is Saudi Arabia, where the royal family recently was shocked by the seizure of the Grand Mosque of Mecca by hundreds of armed militants. Publicly, the government has tried to minimize it as an isolated event, but Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, like many others, believes it is a symptom of broader discontent.

In any case, the royal family, which numbers more than 2,000 princes, has toughened the enforcement of strict Islamic laws, the security forces have been shaken up, and now, as a democratic gesture, there is talk of forming an elected consultative council.

A growing threat to the dynasty is the large number of students and military officers who have been educated and trained abroad, where they have been exposed to radical and revolutionary political ideas. The Middle East Intelligence Survey reports that there have been instances "in which members of the regular army were involved in attempted coups against the regime."

The rising tide of political instability throughout the region is, as Fortune reports, "aggravated by widespread corruption, extremes of wealth and the presence of large numbers of Palestinians and other foreign workers."

SADR
. . . ominous warning

Although many of the immigrant workers have been living in Persian Gulf countries for years, few of them enjoy the prerogatives of native-born citizens. These disgruntled people, Fortune finds, "are prime recruits for the dissident movements that abound in the Middle East."

The upsurge in Shiite fundamentalism that marked the Iranian revolt is seen in the diplomatic world as a danger to governments in Pakistan and Turkey. Some observers also think that Iraq, at the head of the gulf, may be tempted to poach on nearby oil fields.

Moreover, if Syrian withdrawal from Lebanon leads to a renewal of civil war in the latter country, the whole region will be in turmoil. As the Middle East Intelligence Survey notes, there is "hardly a single undisputed border" in the Arabian Peninsula and the Persian Gulf.

today's markets

Toronto

The Toronto stock market fell extremely sharply in active mid-session trading today.

Twelve of the 14 stock groups were lower, with the largest drop in transportation. Shares of communications and forest products companies advanced.

Volume of trading by 1 p.m. was 5.42 million shares, compared with 6.73 million shares at the same time Wednesday.

Declines outnumbered advances 322 to 130 with 199 issues unchanged.

Trading in shares of Patino N. V. resumed at noon following a halt Wednesday. The stock was unchanged at $33 by 1 p.m.

The company said it will buy 332,878 of its outstanding shares from three shareholders at $26 (U.S.) a share and will offer to buy the remaining shares at the same price.

Among industrials, Falconbridge Nickel A dropped 6½ to $135½, Canadian Pacific Investments 2¾ to $45¼, Gulf Canada 2½ to $133½, Dome Petroleum 2⅛ to $71⅛ and Inco 1⅞ to $34½.

Bralorne Resources rose 3½ to $27½, Alberta Energy 1 to $45, MacMillan Bloedel ½ to $30½, Eastern Provincial Airways ½ to $7½ and Canada Permanent Mortgage ⅛ to $18¼.

McIntyre Mines lost 5 to $92, United Keno Hill 3 to $50 and Carolin Mines 2½ to $22½. Pine Point Mines gained ⅛ to $37⅜ and Redstone Resources 14 cents to $1.40.

Vancouver

Prices were down in heavy trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

Of the stocks that traded, 123 advanced, 247 declined and 154 remained steady.

B.C. Resources Investment Corp. led trading in the industrials, declining .05 to $7.80 on 56,270 shares and MacMillan Bloedel remained unchanged at $30⅝ on 10,000. Proflex Ltd. dropped .01 to .27 on 7,500 and Ardiem Industrial Corp. remained steady at .22 on 2,500. CDA Development Corp. remained unchanged at $11⅝ and Gregory Industries remained steady at $5¾.

On the resource and development board, Liberty Petroleums gained .05 to $3.80 on 122,730 shares and Pacific Resources advanced .02 to .54 on 86,600. Hecate Gold Corp. dropped .35 to $1.00 on 76,500 and Amflo Petroleum rose .20 to $3.00 on 74,100. Highwood Resources Warrants gained .04 to .30 and Cream Silver Mines dropped .07 to $1.29.

Grenoble Energy led trading on the curb exchange, remaining steady at $1.75 on 80,740 shares and Tamarind Holding remained unchanged at .61 on 75,500. Nomad Mines Ltd. dropped .25 to $3.65 on 50,700 and West Trend Resources was down .25 to $2.95 on 43,890. Sibola Mines Ltd. gained .09 to .80 and Cleaver Lake Mines dropped .02 to .28.

New York

The New York stock market turned downward today, running into some resistance at its highest level in almost a year and a half.

Losers outnumbered gainers by a 4-to-3 margin in the broad tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts noted that the market had begun to retreat in the latter stages of Wednesday's session.

Once the Dow Jones industrials climbed past the 900 level, some traders evidently decided the time was ripe for cashing in a few of their holdings.

Brokers said investors also seemed to be inclined to hold back awaiting developments in the effort to reach agreement on a plan for the release of the hostages in Iran.

Gold mining issues gave ground as the bullion price eased in world markets.

Gold

LONDON (AP) — Closing gold prices, in U.S. dollars per troy ounce: London, 667.50; Paris, 676.19; Frankfurt, 686.92; Zurich, 685.50; Hong Kong, 680.20.

Bonds

TORONTO (CP) — Prices advanced in active trading on the Canadian bond market Wednesday, following a higher trend in the U.S. market. The short end of the market rose 25 cents. Mid-, long-term, provincial and corporate issues gained one point.

Cattle

CALGARY (CP) — Receipts to 11 a.m. Thursday at the Calgary public stockyards of 475 head consisted mainly of slaughter cows with a light run of slaughter steers and heifers.

Trade was moderate on good condition kinds and dull on average condition kinds and overweight animals. A1-2 slaughter steers traded steady. There were too few slaughter heifers sold to establish trends but a few heifers on hand sold to $73.75. All classes of slaughter cows sold $1 lower. Good bulls were steady.

A1-2 steers over 1,000 lbs. 75-76.20; common to medium 69-72. A1-2 heifers over 850 lbs. 72-73.75. D1-2 cows 53-56; D3-5 48-53. Good bulls 67-69.50.

CANADA IS HURTING
It costs too much money to finance: business loans, home owner mortgages, merchandise stocks, business ventures, new industry. Who is going to bite the bullet and reduce interest charges by law? For the past three years interest rates have continued to rise. Switzerland, Germany and Japan three of the world's strongest economies, enjoy rates from 2 to 7%. Thank you, Canada...

for your heroic act of friendship.

On behalf of deeply appreciative Americans everywhere, Greyhound Lines hereby expresses its gratitude for a singular act of courage and gallantry.

Nobody goes more places in the U.S. than Greyhound Lines. And nobody is more anxious to take Canadians around a country waiting to show its friendship and hospitality. It's our way of allowing grateful Americans to say "Thank you" to their good neighbors to the north.

Effective immediately, Greyhound is happy to offer a special "Thank you, Canada" pass which entitles all Canadians to unlimited travel in the U.S. for 30 days for just $99-Canadian when purchased in Canada, or $99-United States, when purchased in the United States.

The pass may be purchased until April 30, 1980, and is good for transportation through May 30, 1980. It is available to all Canadian residents in Canada and the United States. And it may be used for travel over the full 100,000-mile U.S. route system of Greyhound Lines.

For full details, call your nearest Greyhound agent.

VSE trading tops $1B

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vigorously pursuing its chosen role as the major Canadian centre for financing speculative resource stocks, the Vancouver Stock Exchange has chalked up its first billion-dollar year and seems headed for even more dizzying heights.

Last year saw 913 million shares traded on the VSE for $1.47 billion, a dramatic jump from 1978's 597 million shares and $611 million.

The 36 new listings of 1978 became 124 last year and exchange officials expect at least 200 new listings this year.

Despite the frantic workload, the exchange's innovative computer and other services have kept pace. When other exchanges were forced by mushrooming backlogs of paperwork to cut hours of operation, the VSE had no such constraint, trimming its hours only to keep in line with other exhanges.

With good-natured jibes at the "conservatism" of the older and larger exchanges in eastern Canada, VSE officials say they offer their clients more advanced services.

"Maybe we're more willing to stick our foot in the water," one official said.

The high-flying VSE, however, may have its wings clipped slightly by B.C. government action.

A government white paper on possible revisions to securities' laws has suggested that the VSE no longer be used for primary underwritings.

Primary underwritings — the first issue of common shares in a brand-new company — are avoided by the larger eastern exchanges because of their highly speculative nature. Such new companies have no proven record of performance or accumulated assets to guide potential investors.

But Vancouver stockbrokers maintain that primary underwritings are a valuable exchange service. By conducting them through the VSE, the argue, new companies get more exposure to investors and a better chance of successful launching, while the transactions are subject to more public scrutiny.

For somewhat more established ventures, but ones which still may not have the long track record desired for listing on eastern exchanges, the VSE offers a "curb exchange" listing.

Ater about 12 months on the curb exchange, a company can progress to the higher status of full VSE listing if it meets tougher standards for assets, working capital, orderly trading records and responsible management.

Although emphasizing that new ventures are necessarily speculative, VSE officails add that there should be some organized way for willing investors to take a chance on a new company whose assets may be nothing more than a theory of where oil or ore are hidden.

Reflecting the emphasis on junior resource stocks, the exchange's $1.47 billion in 1979 trading included $964.4 million in resource and development stocks and $285.9 million in curb-exchange stocks, which are also generally resource ventures.

Industrials, stocks of the larger companies that are the lifeblood of eastern exchanges, totalled only $215.5 million, nearly half of which was trading in shares of British Columbia Resources Investment Corp. (BCRIC).

BCRIC, a highly-publicized share offer in 1979 to the B.C. public by the privatization-minded Social Credit government, is far from being the junior resource company that the VSE specializes in.

Eggbeater to boost power

By AB KENT

A 55-foot eggbeater will be whipping up extra electrical power for lower Vancouver Island by summer as an experiment in solar energy recovery.

The wind-driven generator resembling a familiar kitchen appliance is being installed at Rocky Point arsenal, overlooking one of the windiest ocean exposures on the island in a joint project of B.C. Hydro, National Research Council and the provincial ministry of energy, mines and petroleum resources.

Twelve months of testing will determine any operating difficulties that may be encountered in the operation of wind generators which could be used to supplement or replace diesel-powered generators used in remote parts of B.C.

The machine is a vertical-axis wind turbine made by an Ontario firm, DAF Indal Ltd., costs $125,000, designed and supplied by NRC and due to start up May 1.

It is one of six operating at selected test sites across Canada. Two others are being installed.

At Rocky Point — actually Christopher Point overlooking Race Passage — engineers are installing a 50-kilowatt windmill that could supply enough electricity to serve about 10 urban households, or half that number if they use electric heating.

The power developed will be fed by a short new transmission line into the Hydro grid system.

A trailer will house monitoring instruments to measure effectiveness of the installation.

Dr. James M. Hill, renewable energy co-ordinator for the ministry, said if the windmill proves itself it could be used to advantage in such places as the Queen Charlotte Islands, which rely entirely on diesel-generated electricity and are situated in an area with prevailing winds.

There are larger-capacity wind generators of the same type, one installed by Hydro Quebec in the Magdelen Islands putting out 200 kw. Hill said the most practical way to make use of the mills would likely be in batteries or groups in sufficient number and generating enough power to justify the cost of building the connecting transmission lines.

The ministry is contributing $25,000 to the $75,000 Rocky Point installation and operating cost for one year being borne by Hydro.

Aside from the whirling eliptical turbine, the installation will be inconspicuously mounted on a steel tower. Its dimensions are 17 by 11 metres, the pair of blades joined on an axle at their ends, made of hollow extruded aluminum.

Hill said average wind speed at Christopher Point is "perfectly adequate" based on meteorological statistics from nearby Race Rocks lighthouse. The dynamo will start operating when the turbine is being driven by 12 mph winds, and is protected by an automatic braking system that starts working before winds reach the range of 100 mph.

Centrifugal force activates a spoiler on the vanes to cause aerodynamic drag and the whole machine shuts down at the maximum design speed of 130 mph.

It's up to Carter: Bani-Sadr

Bani-Sadr, although he did not specify whether spare parts supplies for Iran's American-equipped forces were part of the plan on Carter's desk.

President Carter also hinted a breakthrough was near.

Carter said in a televised news conference Wednesday night that "positive progress" has been made toward the release of the hostages and that Washington was ready to accept an "appropriate" international commission to resolve the situation.

Western news reports indicated the commission, under the direction of the United Nations, would investigate the alleged crimes of the deposed shah and Iran's charges of U.S. collaboration in the human rights violations of the Pahlavi dynasty.

U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheimexpects the group to spend about two weeks in Iran and then prepare a report on its findings, informed sources said.

Bani-Sadr's statements on the plan appeared to support news reports that U.S. and Iranian authorities had agreed in principle on the plan that could free the hostages within a week to 10 days.

The formula, as outlined by the reports, would allow for the hostages to be released into American hands — not to a third party or an international organization.

The Iranian president said the United States should admit its mistakes in its role in Iran, and added, "Self-criticism is the best way to turn enemies into friends."

Meanwhile, the official Soviet news agency Tass said today President Carter is trying to claim all the oil riches of Iran and the rest of the Persian Gulf region as U.S. property.

In the first Soviet commentary on Carter's news conference held Wednesday in Washington, Tass said the president "reaffirmed the course of undermining detente and exacerbating tensions."

civic affairs

What happened to the dire predictions last fall of a left-right city council split that was going to tear apart Victoria city hall?

There were warnings about the threat of a council takeover — real or imagined, sometimes it doesn't matter in politics — by the NDP.

The sniping was just a touch hypocritical. As expected, several card-carrying New Democrats were elected — along with others who have consorted with known Social Crediters.

But there have been party politics at city hall for years, mainly the small-c conservative variety. When a "two-party system" appeared likely, the griping started.

It's not hard to find links between city council and the two main political parties.

Frank Carson was a Social Credit candidate a few years back. Mayor Bill Tindall worked hard for ex-mayor Mike Young's bid to get elected as a Socred MLA for the city last spring.

(Young, by the way, is now working hard for Tory Allan McKinnon. It's almost certainly McKinnon's last campaign and local New Democrats think Young's the heir apparent. How does a Mike Young-Charles Barber contest in 1984 sound?)

Gretchen Brewin was federal NDP candidate in Victoria last May; Robin Blencoe is running this time. Bill McElroy is another New Democrat — he nominated social worker John Shields last spring as Barber's running mate for the provincial election.

E&N brakeman John Cooper doesn't parade his credentials but if you classify him it has to be on the left side of the political spectrum occupied by the NDP.

Bob Wright, Ron McKenzie and Ken Sinclair's political affiliations are not so obvious but they are paid-up members of the Victoria business establishment, free enterprisers all.

Political affiliations are significant and important differences separate the two groups, but using them as your only guideposts to understanding civic politics quickly confuses.

Personalities are probably more important. Free enterpriser Carson, for example, just doesn't relate to an alderman like Blencoe but he gets along fine with Cooper, council's only blue collar worker — how Carson started out.

And within the two blocs on council there are some violent differences of opinion and personality clashes. Cooper's not exactly a fond admirer of McElroy and Blencoe, for example.

Another reason party politics has not fractured council is that the system encourages co-operation and log-rolling. There are no "government" and "opposition" in municipal politics. Each alderman is assigned a specific area of the civic administration to supervise. A lot of the problems aimed his way — barking dogs, potholed streets — don't lend themselves to an ideological interpretation.

Most of the time.

Council has split in half on several important issues but not along "party lines." McElroy has voted with the so-called right-wingers sometimes and Wright, who used to be a bastion of bottom line conservatism, is a savior of the neighborhoods on other issues. They love him in James Bay.

McElroy may soon be drummed out of the NDP if he doesn't shape up and follow party doctrine on the supremacy of the neighborhoods. If it becomes widely known how many motherhood issues he has voted against, he may drop right off the polls next time.

Give him credit, though, for voting his principles. He was all for widening Gorge Road, even when a dozen residents protested and Cooper, the traffic committee chairman, managed to convince Wright and Sinclair it was a bad move.

He voted with the majority on the Foul Bay Safeway project to expand its parking lot by bulldozing three adjacent homes. That didn't sit well with Blencoe, Cooper and Brewin. Neither did the rezoning of an old house in Fernwood for medical offices, which meant the eviction of several tenants.

McElroy was the fervent spokesman for "good planning" practices in each case, but his fellow NDPers just saw ordinary people being shoved out to find new accommodation in a zero rental market. First things first.

Swan Lake residents say Saanich broke its promise

Loss of parkland attacked

Buy back property sold to developer: residents

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY

A group of angry Swan Lake area residents is claiming several lots sold by Saanich to a developer were slated to become parkland.

The organizer of a protest against the recent sale said Wednesday municipal council went back on a promise to include three lots in the 60-acre Swan Hill-Christmas Lake Nature Park.

But municipal planner Alan Hopper said the lots are not officially designated future park property.

The lots, on Lancaster Road, were sold to developer Don Metcalf for single-family homes. Metcalf's consultant John Cowlin recently applied for rezoning from A-1 (agricultural) to RS-2 (detached housing).

Matthew Julian, 3877 Douglas, said he purchased his own home on the understanding the properties behind his house would eventually become part of the park.

Other residents around the lake thought the same thing, Julian said.

"Everyone around the lake is really worried now," he said.

Council Monday will be presented with a petition demanding the lots be repurchased by the municipality and given to the nature centre.

Hopper said they were never intended to be part of the park and are not even included in the original plan.

The park now consists of 60 acres and another 12 acres will be acquired in future, he said.

The original plan has been amended since a 1973 nature park study. About 20 acres once considered for inclusion are now too expensive to acquire.

Julian said the residents are upset because they were not told of a sale offer made ~~last~~ fall. They are questioning the ethics of the planning and land-use committees, he said.

"Land that is owned by the municipality is owned by the residents and taxpayers of that municipality and is held in trust for them by council," the letter charges.

Julian said a plan in the nature centre marks the lots "for future acquisition by the park."

Residents are concerned the development will destroy wildlife habitat and that extensive landfill necessary before development can take place will cause many ecological problems.

Landfill would stop natural drainage into marsh area north of Swan Lake that supports aquatic birds and mammals. Any change of drainage would adversely affect life there, the letter states.

Sewage from the house that will be built around the park will drain into the marsh polluting the environment and further threatening animal populations, it says.

"This poses very serious questions as to the very existence of that area as part of the nature park — if wildlife dies out in the area, can it still be called a nature park?"

Hopper said a public hearing on the rezoning should take place in a couple of months after a bylaw extending the sewer enterprise area is completed.

Jumbo umbrella for herring fleet

The herring roe fishery may be threatened by a price fight but the men who make the catch will get widespread protection when they set sail around March 5.

The department of national defence, Transport Canada and Fisheries and Oceans are combining forces to provide an air and marine search and rescue umbrella for the fishing fleet.

This year the Canadian armed forces' 441 Search and Rescue Squadron at CFB Comox will deploy Labrador helicopters to coastal airfields to follow the fishing fleet.

Buffalo search aircraft, equippped with pumps and liferafts that can be dropped will fly daily patrols out of Comox. Comox-based Tracker and Argus aircraft will provide additional fleet coverage during their normal patrols.

The Canadian Coast Guard has increased its primary search and rescue fleet to 14 vessels for this year's fishery by chartering the Bastion City and tasking the government vessels Parizeau and Richardson as primary search and rescue craft.

The Coast Guard cutters Ready, Racer and Rider will accompany the fleet along Vancouver Island and the north coast. They will also patrol the hazardous transit areas between the fishing grounds.

Two Vancouver-based rescue hovercraft and two cutters will provide coverage for the lower end of the Strait of Georgia and the Gulf Islands. Coverage in the Tofino, Bamfield and Bull Harbor areas will be provided by three lifeboats.

The CCG vessel Relite will be available as required in the Campbell River area while the Bastion City will patrol the Gulf Islands and the Straits of Georgia.

The Richardson will patrol the Straits of Georgia and Juan de Fuca and the Parizeau will operate off Vancouver Island's west coast, the Queen Charlottes and Hecate Strait.

Search and rescue operations will be co-ordinated by the Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre. The telephone number is 388-1543 in Victoria.

Bloom boom: 2.7 million

Healthy boost provided by Western Community

A record 2.7 million flowers were tabulated during Victoria's annual flower count, due to the efforts of people like Brian Holt, a Grade 4 student at Sangster Elementary School.

Brian spent several hours carefully tabulating 9,900 blooms as part of a spring awareness project at the school.

With the help of other students, the total Sangster count went over 11,000.

The spring awareness project was organized by Rob Waters, manager of Pedder Bay Marina, who has expanded the flower count idea originated by the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

The Waters campaign, which included recreation centres, parks and golf courses as well as the schools, produced a western total of 328,000, which helped to push Victoria's fifth annual flower count far past the target of two million.

The Waters totals included 60,000 from members of the Juan de Fuca Recreation Centre, 10,000 from Colwood Golf Club and almost 10,000 more from Fort Rodd.

Carmela Costigan, co-ordinator of the district-wide project, said the western totals were the most dramatic new element in the annual event.

"Getting the schools involved was a super idea."

Closer to the city, she said, the largest count came from Vantreight Farms with just over 400,000 flowers.

Butchart Gardens employees counted 101,000.

A Chamber of Commerce team counted 5,000 blooms in one section of Beacon Hill Park.

There were fewer flowers in back yards than last year (when the over-all total was only 1.6 million) but the large number from Vantreight and the western communities more than made up the difference, Costigan said.

One of the largest backyard totals was 20,000 blossoms on flowering shrubs.

As usual, there was some difficulty in deciding what to count. The rules call for the tabulation of each individual flower or clusters of blossoms, but not each single blossom.

One woman reported a count of 300,000 in her backyard, which amazed Flower Count Central, because Butchart Gardens only had 101,000. It turned out she had counted (or estimated) for each individual blossom on her heather bushes.

"We have only been counting heather by the stem, not the individual blossom. We allowed something for the total but nothing like 300,000."

Costigan said the Vantreight total was tabulated at the time the flowers were shipped out and the count was accurate. Butchart employees also took extra care with their total.

Tourism B.C. was busy filming some of this activity for showing on the Prairies during a tourist blitz in March.

About 1,700 press releases will go out to newspapers and travel writers across North America this week announcing the 2.7 million total.

Most popular items counted during the seven days were tree blossoms, daffodils, crocuses, polyanthus, snowdrops and heather.

Winner of an engraved shovel presented by former human resources minister Bill Vander Zalm was Rubymay Parrott, chairman of the Saanich School Board. The shovel was awarded to whoever made the next call after a certain time. She was reporting the blossom count from her home in Ardmore.

The flower count started in 1976 when 183,000 were tabulated. The total has increased year by year, partly due to the increased number of people doing the counting.

Owner Howard Poole surveys burned out trailer

Two held after fire

A juvenile boy and a 17-year-old youth have been charged with mischief after two 13-foot travel trailers were destroyed by fire Wednesday night.

Colwood RCMP said the juvenile, age 15, was picked up at the scene as Langford firemen fought the fire at Poole's RV Traveland, 1080 Goldstream.

William Allan Scott Gushowaty, no fixed address, was arrested a few hours later.

He was to have appeared in provincial court later today.

Police said the fire broke out about 10 p.m. in one trailer and spread to another. Eight other trailers parked nearby were threatened for a time.

Owner Howard Poole estimated the loss at about $3,000.

U.S. remembers Iran at Olympic opening

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (CP) — Undoubtedly Ambassador Ken Taylor had something to do with the warmth of the Canadian team's reception at Wednesday's opening ceremonies of the 13th Winter Olympics.

But today the Canadians are on their own. The gold medal the United States Congress is presenting to the ambassador for ferrying home U.S. hostages from Iran won't count in the Olympic standings.

Still, Canada's competitors in downhill skiing, speed skating, luge and hockey had to be encouraged as they went into action today by the welcome they received from the crowd of 25,000 who braved frigid temperatures and a horrendous traffic jam to watch the colorful opening-day parade.

The Canadians, in red and white toques and red parkas and white ski suits, were a splash of color in the parade of 37 national teams, marching between the brown-clad Bulgarians and the midnight-blue uniforms of the Chinese.

While the loudest cheers went to the U.S. contingent, in sheepskin jackets, jeans, cowboy hats and boots, there was little doubt that Canada stood second in the affections of the crowd.

"They remember the incident in Iran and the 'thank you' was still in the air," said Maurice Allan, secretary of the Canadian Olympic Association.

There were cheers and only a scattering of boos as the Soviet team appeared, sombre in fur overcoats but waving to the crowd.

Absent from the parade was the team from Taiwan, following its unsuccessful court bid to force the International Olympic Committee to allow it to carry the flag and use the name of the Republic of China.

The Taiwanese formally asked to be excused from the Games, a manoeuvre designed to prevent expulsion from the IOC, which would have resulted automatically from their refusal to compete, and headed for home today.

In Wednesday's only athletic activity, defending champion Dettlef Gunther of East Germany and 1978 world champion Vera Zozulya of the Soviet Union won the opening runs of single luge competition and Herbert Plank of Italy, a bronze medalist in 1976, posted the fastest time as the skiers had their final training run for today's men's dowhill.

Gunther broke the track record with a clocking of 43.20 seconds in the first of four runs which will decide the luge title. Ernst Hapsinger, a lightly regarded Italian, was second in 43.43.

Zozulya turned the tables on Melitta Sollman of East Germany, the 1979 and 1980 world champion, as she also set a track record of 38.98 seconds. Sollman was second in 39.29.

The best showing among the Canadian lugers was a 16th-place finish by Mark Jensen of Toronto. Bruce Smith of Mississauga, Ont., was 23rd. In the women's event, Carole Keyes of Woodstock, Ont., placed 18th and Danielle Nadeau of Montreal was 20th.

Despite Plank's first-place finish in the final training run, ahead of Peter Wirnsberger of Austria and Steve Podborski of Toronto, the favorites today were Peter Mueller of Switzerland and Ken Read of Calgary, the World Cup leaders. Read was fifth Wednesday and Mueller was ninth, just behind Dave Murray of Whistler, B.C.

The Canadian hockey team faced Poland tonight in its second start of preliminary-round competition following a 10-1 victory over the Netherlands Tuesday. The Poles upset Finland 5-4 in their first game.

Scullers won't believe the Moscow trip is off

Each day at dawn, while most of you are still asleep, they are out there on the calm waters of Elk Lake pulling their oars quietly through the morning mist.

They are Canada's best rowers — or scullers to be precise — who are working toward their dream of representing their country in the Olympic Games.

And on the shore, watching them with a critical eye, is their coach who will tell you his athletes will simply not believe Canada might not go to the Games.

He's a tall, strong man, Victoria's Danish-born Olympic coach Leif Gotfredsen. And he has some pretty harsh things to say about the fuss over the 1980 Games in Moscow and even about holding the Olympic training camp on the Island.

"My feelings about the Olympics is that Joe Clark is trying to take something away from us that he hasn't even given to us," Leif says. "I think he's a big joke."

Some 20 women scullers (they each pull two oars compared with just a single blade operated by the sweep-oar rowers) from Victoria, Calgary, Ottawa, St. Catharines, Hamilton and London in Ontario, Halifax and Montreal are training at Elk Lake under Gotfredsen. Jack Nicholson of Toronto is looking after the male scullers although right now he's in Spain working out with his protege and medal hopeful Andrea Schreiner of Ridley College in St. Catharines. She was edged out of a bronze in the world championship by a few inches.

Canada's sweep-oar rowers are training over on Burnaby Lake under coaches Al Roaf of Vancouver (assisted by University of Victoria's Al Morrow) for the women and Rod Bell-Irving of Vancouver for the men.

"I've been giving my time since Oct.1, helping the rowers who want to make it to the Olympics and what we've got so far from Ottawa is absolutely nothing!" says Gotfredsen. "We've had no money and no boats for the national rowing camp. Without the Victoria City Rowing Club, there wouldn't be a national rowing camp.

"The girls have all come here on their own and have brought their own boats. So far they haven't helped us at all. I don't want any money . . . but I sure would like some equipment so I can do a decent job.

"Now he (Clark) says he's going to take it all away from us," Gotfredsen says, referring to the threatened boycott of the Olympics. "It's so easy for them to say that. It's us who are putting all our time, effort and energies into this and they are using this time and energy to get even with the Russians."

But, says the coach, the rowers aren't giving up.

"They don't believe they're not going . . and right up to the day they are supposed to leave, they won't believe it because they are so obsessed with making the team."

Actually, though there are eight types of races for men and six for women, few would make it to Moscow even if the Games go ahead. That's because the Olympic qualifying times for the events are very steep and Canada wont want to send any boat unless it has a chance of making it at least into the semi-finals.

Canada's recent medal performances haven't been anything to rave about. Last time we won a gold was in the Tokyo Olympics in 1964 when Roger Jackson and George Hungerford of Vancouver pulled off a victory.

"I saw that race," says Leif, who was there himself competing in the singles. He placed eighth and says his best performance was a silver with Doc Clarke of Toronto in the doubles at the Pan-Am Games in 1967.

Canada also had a silver medal in the eights in Rome in 1960 and a gold in the fours (all rowers were from Vancouver) at the Melbourne Games in 1956.

"But those were all in sweep-oar rowing and for our last sculling medals you have to go back to 1932 in the Los Angeles Games when Canada won a bronze in the doubles, and to 1928 in Amsterdam when we took a silver, also in the doubles," Leif points out.

Gotfredsen was against holding the training camp at Elk Lake, he says, because of the lack of facilities. There are no change rooms or showers and the athletes stand a great risk of getting colds or worse when they sweat and then stand around in the chill air.

Still, the Victoria City Rowing Club and the UVic Club, working under the umbrella of the new Victoria Rowing Society, is frantically building an addition to the old clubhouse and planned for the future is a larger building that will have all the necessary facilities.

Rowers will be at the camp until May when they will be timed in trials, probably on Burnaby Lake.

With the Olympics dying how will amateurs survive?

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (CP) — There's talk that because the current political upheaval has all but cancelled the Moscow Summer Olympics, the end of the Olympic movement in its present format is imminent.

And none too soon for many so-called amateur athletes, including some world-class skiers who openly indulge themselves at the expense of manufacturers.

Austrian Karl Schranz flaunted his endorsements to the staid International Olympic Committee prior to the 1972 Winter Games in Sapporo, Japan, and was disqualified.

Many top European skiers have, in the American tradition, pleaded the Fifth Amendment rather than discuss their contractual arrangements with suppliers of skis, bindings, poles, boots, goggles, helmets, gloves and other equipment.

It's a constant battle among athletes and the industry to harness the best combinations of both. Winners have the best chance to cash in.

Canada's exciting men's downhill ski team is in position to make the most of the situation, now ranked right there with the Austrians in the most glamorous of Alpine events.

Earlier this week, during trial runs for today's Olympic downhill race at nearby Whiteface Mountain, one prominent European skier said listing World Cup skiing as an amateur sport was a travesty on reality.

"We are certainly professionals in the true sense of the word," the European said. "So I would not be unhappy to see the Olympic movement die. It is a big joke to most athletes."

Canadian veteran Dave Irwin wouldn't disagree with that blanket assessment of amateur skiing, but pleaded not guilty when it was suggested he might be masquerading as an amateur.

"I don't really know how I should be classed," the 26-year-old Canadian national team veteran said. "But as far as FIS (the International Ski Federation) is concerned, and the Canadian Ski Association, I'm an amateur. I've followed all the rules.

"Rules are made that qualify you as an amateur. Rules are made that qualify you as a pro."

Former Canadian teammate Jim Hunter tried to supplement his World Cup ski career by writing articles on the sport but seemed to be thwarted at every turn by rigid rules governing amateurism. He finally tossed in the towel and turned pro.

I don't know what Jim's rules were at the time," Irwin said. "But the four of us on the A team wrote a book this fall. It was called Ski the Canadian Way.

"We have received no money from that publication at all; none whatsoever. All the money from that book will go to the CSA and they do what they see fit with it."

Does that mean that he and his downhill teammates, Ken Read, Dave Murray and Steve Podborski, won't realize any royalties from the book's sale.

"That's a good possibility," Irwin said. "The money or any part of the money from sales of the book might go into a trust fund. But right now I don't know where the money went."

U.S., Aussies plan rival games

The Australian and United States governments have discussed setting up international games to rival the Moscow Summer Olympics, Australian Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser said Wednesday.

Fraser, responding to a White House call for American athletes to stay away from Moscow, said he believes there is a "good deal of support" for alternative games.

Leafs like a tonic for some

Times News Services

A trip to Toronto is turning out to be just what the doctor ordered for slump-ridden National Hockey League teams.

Perhaps taking a cue from Los Angeles Kings — who snapped a seven-game losing streak by trouncing Toronto 7-2 at Maple Leaf Gardens last Saturday — Pittsburgh Penguins used their visit Wednesday to defeat the Leafs 4-2 and snap a six-game skid of their own.

"A win like this may work as a tonic," said Pittsburgh coach Johnny Wilson.

The victory was only the Penguins' second in their last 13 games. The Leafs, who remained tied with idle Quebec Nordiques at the bottom of the Adams Division, lost for the 11th time in 17 starts.

Pittsburgh goaltender Bob Holland faced only 17 shots from a disjointed Maple Leaf offence while his mates directed 36 at Curt Ridley, making his debut in the Toronto net after being purchased from Vancouver Canucks earlier this week. Ridley gave up a goal to veteran Nick Libett from close range 43 seconds into game but was sharp throughout the rest of the contest, particulary in the third period when Pittsburgh outshot Toronto 16-4.

The victory may have been costly for the Penguins. Centre Greg Malone, Pittsburgh's leading scorer (19 goals, 32 assists), limped off the ice late in the game after absorbing a stiff check from Leaf winger Wilf Paiement. The diagnosis was torn ligaments in his knee.

While Toronto's eyes were on Ridley, Edmonton supporters cheered Jim Corsi. A spectator for the first half of the game, he came off the bench to help Oilers improve their playoff prospects as Edmonton upset Minnesota North Stars 5-3. Edmonton coach Glen Sather yanked starter Don Cutts after Minnesota had tied the score 3-3 in the second period. Corsi came on to shut out Minnesota the rest of the way.

Corsi and Cutts, neither of whom was on Edmonton's roster when the season opened, combined to stop 37 shots.

In other games, the Black Hawks downed New York Rangers 3-1 in Chicago and Atlanta Flames left Detroit with one point after a 2-2 tie against the Red Wings.

Three bagged . . .three more on wing

By BILL WALKER

Three down and bagged, with three to go, is the countdown for Island curlers going into weekend action.

The victory of Tim Horrigan's rink in the B.C. final, and with it a berth in the Brier at Calgary, March 2-9, made it three Island rinks in the nationals of three major events.

Earlier, Stacey Coomber of Nanaimo qualified for the Canadian Pepsi-Cola junior championship at Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., beginning Sunday; and Glen Harper of Duncan won a berth in the Canadian senior men's championship at St. John, N.B., March 9-14.

Coomber represented the province in the junior championship held in Victoria last year.

The three places in the nationals still open, and Island rinks bidding for similar recognition are:

Girls: Lana Lacheur, Oak Bay, in the provincial championship which started at Tsawwassen Wednesday;

Senior women: Defending Canadian champion Flora Martin, Victoria, the championship at North Vancouver;

Mixed: Fred Duncan, Alberni, the championship at Williams Lake.

Lacheur's Oak Bay rink and Patti Jennings of North Vancouver took the early lead in the girls' playdowns as both rinks posted a pair of victories Wednesday.

Lecheur downed Sandra Guenther of Vernon 8-4 and Joanne Christinson of Fort St. John 7-6 while Jennings nipped Carol Strueby of Chilliwack 9-8 and doubled Janet MacWilliam of Burnaby 6-3. Cheryl Patton of Cranbrook and Shelley Macfarlane of Prince George also were undefeated with 1-0 records as each rink drew a bye.

Meanwhile, the Steve Skillings rink has won another super league championship. Skillings and mates Murray Walker, Rob Cummings and Don Nemeth finished the Harley Davidson Series undefeated in 18 games.

First place was worth $900 plus $10 for each point, giving the Skillings foursome a total of $1,260.

Horrigan (12-6) skipped his rink to second place and $540 plus $120 in bonus points and Al Frame (10-8) won $360 for third place plus $100 in bonuses.

The others, in order: Brad Clarke 9-9, Bob Hawkes 8-10, Barry Harvey 7-11, Bill Morris 7-11, Barry Moore 7-11, Bruce Coulter 6-12, Don Matheson 6-12.

The Super League's annual meeting will be held at the Racquet Club Feb. 26, followed by an evening of "horse races." Everyone is welcome.

Otherwise, there is the pilfered purple heart puzzle. Some may call it the coaster-poster case.

As every curler knows a purple heart is a badge of honor, a mark of dinstinction. It is recognized everywhere and signifies participation in a national final.

At any rate, while the Horrigan rink was being honored at VCC Monday, Kelly Horrigan went to retrieve his dearly-won purple heart. It wasn't there.

A quick search of the area failed to locate the missing badge. An appeal on the club PA system failed to produce it. It was feared stolen, then it was suggested perhaps some of Horrigan's curling friends were playing a joke.

But no. It was a simple mistake and the heart now has been returned.

It seems that one member, hearing the announcement that, "posters" signifying the first Labatts Brier were available to those who wanted them, mistook the word "poster" for "coaster", picked up what he thought was a giveaway coaster, proudly showed it off to some of his friends and toddled off home.

The next day he received a call from one of those who had seen the coaster suggesting it might be the missing purple heart. It was.

Tonight in sports

Pearkes Arena will be the site of two South Island Big Six Hockey league games with PPCLI Pats and Duncan Silver Park Blades squaring off at 8:15 and Western Homes Buckaroos and Victoria Athletics meeting at 9:45.

Shero, Flyers' pair share Patrick award

NEW YORK (AP) — Edward Snider, Fred Shero and Bobby Clarke were named Wednesday as recipients of the 1980 Lester Patrick Trophies, presented for outstanding service to hockey in the United States.

They will receive the awards March 10 at the annual Patrick Awards Dinner in New York.

Snider is chairman of the board and majority owner of Philadelphia Flyers. He has been a member of many National Hockey League committees, including the advisory committee and executive committee of the Owner-Player Council.

Shero, coach and general manager of New York Rangers, has been one of the most successful coaches for the past decade.

Clarke, assistant coach and centre for the Flyers, recently moved into 15th place on the NHL's all-time scoring list. Clarke is in his 11th NHL season.

Bays, Mt. Doug coast to victory

Oak Bay Barbarians and Mt. Douglas Mountainmen came up with lopsided victories in Greater Victoria High School Rugby League action Wednesday.

Barbarians bounced Belmont Braves 31-4 while Mountainmen mauled Lambrick Park, 48-6.

In other matches, Claremont Spartans topped Reynolds Roadrunners 16-11, Esquimalt Dockers blanked Parkland Panthers 9-0 and Stelly's Stingers nudged Victoria Titans, 4-3.

Mark Wyatt set the pace for Barbarians by scoring a try and kicking a penalty goal and two converts.

Amir Namdari scored three tries for Mt. Douglas while Colin Ayers booted two penalty goals and five converts.

Spartans were led by Dan Hammick's try and two converts.

Tom Woods scored all Esquimalt points with a try, a convert and a penalty goal.

Jay Purdy scored the lone try for Stingers while Don Barnes countered dwith a penalty goal for Titans.

Western sticks to happy formula

Western Equipment Juniors are hot all of a sudden.

After going winless for three months, Western collected its third straight victory Wednesday by toppling Victoria Athletics 98-85 in Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League action at Central Junior High School.

In another game, Ivy's Strathcona Hotel topped Trilec Seniors 78-69 at S.J. Willis Junior High.

Chris Adams set the pace for Western with 24 points while Wayne Russell added 22 and Russ Mosher hit for 20. Loris Corletto fired 10 points to top Athletics, who trailed 53-39 at half time.

Dave Morgan, who recently returned after recovering from a leg injury, fired 27 points to spark Ivy's while Grant Boland added 18. Steve Pescod sank 23 for Trilec.

In Victoria Senior "B" Women's League play, Marg Mainwaring tipped in 18 points to pace Sneekers to a 69-63 decision over UVic Jayvees.

Mike Squire hit for 26 points as Rangers tripped Victoria Van and Storage 82-64 in senior "C" men's play.

Swimmers active

The water at the Crystal Pool will churn feverishly for the next few weeks.

The 53rd annual Greater Victoria elementary school novice swim meet is scheduled to start at 8:30 a.m. Saturday.

And, on Feb. 23, more experienced swimmers in the same age group will compete in the elementary school championships starting at 4:30 p.m.

The provincial short-course championships will be staged at the Crystal Garden Feb. 29-March 2.

Blaisdell's four help Regina gain

By The Canadian Press

Mike Blaisdell scored four goals to lead Regina to a 10-2 victory over New Westminster Bruins as the Pats closed to within two points of the Eastern Division lead in the Western Hockey League Wednesday night.

In another contest, Lethbridge Broncos helped Regina's cause by clipping the Eastern-leading Calgary Wranglers for the first time this season by a score of 4-2.

In Regina, Ron Flockhart with two, Bill Ansell, Brian Varga, Darren Veitch and Doug Wickenhieser also scored for the Pats, who leave this week for a West Coast road trip that may help determine the overall point leader at the end of the season. Regina, Calgary, Victoria Cougars and Portland Winter Hawks are separated by only six points in the overall tabulation.

New Westminster took eight of 12 minor penalties and was outshot 54-24. Regina made the Bruins pay for their penalties by scoring five power-play goals.

In Lethbridge, the Broncos led throughout the game. They jumped to a 2-0 first-period lead and split four goals with the Wranglers during the last two periods.

Doug Morrison scored twice for the Broncos, firing his second into an empty net with 31 seconds remaining. Mike Moller and Dennis Labbe were the other Lethbridge marksmen.

Kelly Kisio, with his 55th goal of the season, and Leigh Verstraete scored for Calgary.

The Broncos outshot the Wranglers 38-36 and each team picked up four minor penalties and two majors.

Late heroics save Belmont

Don't accuse Belmont Braves of playing ho-hum basketball.

The Muzz Bryant-coached Braves, getting big baskets from Fred Burke and Al Cole, capped a whirlwind finish Wednesday to shade Victoria High Totems 89-88 in overtime and clinch at least a tie for first place in the Greater Victoria High School Boys "AA" League.

Down by 10 points with 2½ minutes remaining, the Braves turned on all the burners and forced overtime when Cole hit the game-saver with four seconds left in regulation time. That tied it 79-79.

The scrappy Totems had another chance to upset the leaders in overtime, leading 88-87 until Burke connected for the winner with five seconds left. Even then, Totems came back but Darren Alexander's desperation shot at the final buzzer just missed.

Cole wound up with 24 points while Ray McAlister and Marc Haas each scored 18 for Belmont. Alexander scored 26, Paul Russell 22 and Daryl Adams 17 for Vic High.

In senior girls' league action, Carlene Mackereth scored 19 points to pace Spectrum to a 44-36 victory over Belmont.

And in North Island Boys' League play, Port Alberni beat Campbell River 68-57.

I am driving not only the toughest 4-wheel drive vehicle on the market, I am driving (in my opinion) the sharpest 4-wheel drive vehicle on the market. My demonstrator is a 1980 JEEP CJ-7 LAREDO, finished in Bordeaux metallic, with gleaming chrome bumpers and wheels. It's powered by the 304 V-8, with automatic trans., power steering, power disc brakes, tilt wheel, radio, heavy duty battery, heavy duty cooling, and all the "Laredo" equipment. "Jeep" wrote the book on 4-wheel drive, make no mistake, Jeep is the real thing! Others may look like Jeep, but there are no others built like Jeep. Jockey pleads guilty in race-fixing case

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — A jockey on trial in the Pocono Downs race fixing case has pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court, leaving 12 defendants still on trial.

Lawrence Reynolds of Williamsport, Md., pleaded guilty Wednesday to a single count of conspiracy. Twelve other charges against him will be dropped in a plea bargain agreement.

Reynolds is the third jockey to plead guilty in the case. Five other jockeys are among those still on trial in federal court.

The defendants are accused of fixing a series of 1974 thoroughbred races at Pocono Downs, near Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

A group of conspirators allegedly bribed jockeys, owners, trainers and a track official to keep certain favored horses from placing in certain races.

GENERAL MOTORS DIESEL POWER ...

A LOGICAL CHOICE IN TODAY'S MOTORING WORLD ...

In today's energy-conscious times, 5.7-litre diesel V8 engines achieve an impressive level of fuel efficiency in North American-produced cars and light-duty pickup trucks with livelier performance than you might expect in a diesel. As well, you will likely have the money-saving advantages of using diesel fuel. We re now accepting orders for Oldsmobile Passenger Cars, Chevrolet Station Wagons and Chevrolet Pickup Trucks with diesel engines.

Before the judge

Judge Blake Allan committed a 22-year-old man for higher-court trial on a charge of armed robbery following a preliminary hearing Wednesday in provincial court.

Daniel Norman Christie, 1178 Lockley, was charged in connection with last month's holdup of the 7-Eleven Food Store at Hillside and Douglas. He was also charged with possession of a dangerous weapon and carrying a concealed weapon in a separate incident last month.

Defence lawyer Steven Kelliher elected trial by judge without jury when Christie first appeared Jan. 20.

Judge Harold Alder handed out sentences totalling 22 months to Michael Kirby Dick, 28, of 21 Cooper.

He pleaded guilty to 15 counts of false pretences and one count each of theft over $200 and breach of recognizance.

Crown counsel Don Laughton listed 15 cheques, varying from $12.50 to $341.81, written on a Toronto-Dominion Bank branch in Duncan, a Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce branch in Esquimalt, and an Esquimalt branch of Westcoast Savings Credit Union. The cheques, which amounted to $999.83 and written between April and September, 1978, were returned marked insufficient funds.

Dick was convicted of 38 counts of false pretences in Victoria on Oct. 16, 1977, and given a one-year-definite, one-year-indeterminate sentence and was convicted of a further 13 counts of the same charge May 2, 1979, in Duncan, when he received a suspended sentence and two years probation.

Laughton said there were five warrants of committal waiting to be served on Dick, who had failed to pay any of the restitution ordered in connection with his previous convictions.

The theft charge was in connection with a vehicle from Budget Rent-A-Car. Laughton said Dick signed a rental agreement Oct. 3 which specified that the car be returned by noon, Oct. 5. When the vehicle had not been returned by Oct. 13 Colwood RCMP were notified. It was found a week later by Vancouver police.

The breach was of a condition of his bail when he was released Sept. 12 by Judge Gilbert Hogg in Victoria provincial court. Dick was ordered to remain on Vancouver Island but was seen Oct. 26 at the Tsawwassen ferry terminal by a deputy sheriff.

Defence lawyer Victor Simpson asked Alder to consider that the 15 false pretence counts were part of a "spree" which included the 13 Duncan counts.

He said Dick started a small business, Thunderbird Construction, and money promised from the federal Indian Affairs ministry never arrived.

On the auto theft charge, Simpson said his client signed the rental agreement for a friend who didn't have a driver's licence and that it was the friend who took the car to the mainland.

Explaining the breach, Simpson said Dick's wife and children were returning to Victoria from Lower Post, B.C., and needed transportation. Dick went to Vancouver and came back with them on the ferry.

Alder imposed 16 one-month sentences on the false pretences and breach of recognizance convictions, but made them consecutive to each other. He then imposed a six-month sentence on the auto theft and also made it consecutive to the 16 months already imposed.

A 44-year-old man was fined a total of $500 for theft and possession of stolen property.

Gregory Thaddeus Iverson, 3220 Wilshire, pleaded guilty in connection with a Feb. 2 incident at The Bay, 1701 Douglas.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said Iverson was spotted placing two items in a Bay shopping bag and was followed out to a vehicle where he emptied the bag and returned to the store.

He was arrested after taking other items and Victoria police found a total of $107.50 worth of stolen goods, $30.97 of it in the car.

Mulligan also said Iverson was given a conditional discharge May 14, 1976, for theft.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: Robert Stanley Reader, 44, of 3608 Happy Valley, $400; Larry McBride, 32, of 2694 Deville, $400; William Zane Kersch, 20, of 729 Walpole, $400; and Earl Winston Turpec, 64, of 1082 Davie, $50.

In addition, Kersch was fined $200 for refusing a breath test demand and Turpec was ordered to perform 50 hours of community service work.

Guerrillas jailed

TEL AVIV (Reuter) — Three Palestinian guerrillas convicted of attempting to shoot down an Israeli airliner over Kenya three years ago have been sentenced to 18 years in prison here, the Israeli news agency Itim reported.

Outfall judgment later

Judgment was reserved in B.C. Supreme Court Wednesday in a judicial review of a cabinet order which permitted a sewage outfall off Esquimalt Lagoon.

Mr. Justice J.C. Bouck gave no indication when he will give his decision after hearing closing arguments with the arrival of an English translation of a Quebec Court of Appeal case dealing with the powers of administrative tribunals.

The judicial review arose from a petition by residents of Albert Head-Colwood who asked that a cabinet decision in 1978 allowing the outfall be quashed.

The director of the Pollution Control Branch issued a permit in 1977 allowing sewage to be discharged into the sea opposite Esquimalt Lagoon on condition that secondary treatment be provided by the end of 1981.

Three ratepayer groups appealed to the Pollution Control Board and the appeal was successful.

But this was appealed by the Capital Regional District to the cabinet which allowed the appeal on condition that no more than 70 lots be served.

9 months added to wait in jail

A 35-year-old man who spent 4½ months in custody before release on bail was sentenced in county court Wednesday to nine months after being convicted by Judge Peter Millward of possession of stolen drugs.

Millward said he had to consider the criminal record of John Arthur Heffernan and he took into account time already spent in custody.

Heffernan's criminal record began in 1964 with attempted theft and included offences such as possession of heroin, forcible confinement, armed robbery, theft and possession of stolen property.

Millward said it was clear the drugs were stolen in a pharmacy break-in and Heffernan either knew or should have known this and he was reckless in the way they were obtained.

In another case, Millward sentenced David Stanley Cooper, 19, to 30 days in jail, to be served on weekends, after he pleaded guilty to theft June 27 of automotive parts from Associated Auto Wreckers, 2015 Millstream.

Cooper, who has a previous conviction for possession of stolen property and was on probation at the time of the theft offence, was also placed on probation for one year.

No sign ship hit bottom before capsizing: diver

VANCOUVER (CP) — The diver who first entered the capsized freighter Lee Wang Zin said Wednesday the port side of the vessel was ripped away but there was no sign on the part that remained that the ship had struck bottom before it turned over.

Del Hansen of Ketchikan, Alaska, told a coroner's inquest into the deaths of two of 30 crew members that when he entered the upturned vessel Dec. 29 he looked for air pockets and possible signs of life.

He found the upper portion of the ship massively damaged, especially on the port side, and there were no survivors or bodies to be found.

The Lee Wang Zin, a Taiwanese bulk ore carrier, capsized Christmas Day off the northern British Columbia coast after leaving Tasu on the Queen Charlotte Islands bound for Japan. It later drifted into Alaskan waters before being towed out to sea where it sank.

All crew members are believed to have perished but only two bodies were found.

Hansen, who owns Alaska Diving Services, said weather prevented a dive into the partially-submerged vessel until Dec. 29. He said he was asked by U.S. Coast Guard officials to pay particular attention to whether the ship's lifeboats still were visible.

There had been hopes for several days after the vessel overturned there might be survivors, either in air pockets under the ship or in lifeboats.

Hansen said he intended to look for bodies and was expecting to find them in the wheelhouse.

But when he got under the upturned ship, he found the wheelhouse had disappeared and estimated two decks also were gone.

"The whole top of the superstructure was totally demolished, ripped completely off, more on the port side than the starboard side.

"I was slightly amazed and a bit confused. I wandered around and looked but it was hard to tell where I was."

He said he rapped on pipes and listened for a return signal but heard none.

Hansen said his son Scott, who had gone forward along the ship, reported the cargo of 54,000 tons of iron ore pellets was gone.

The diver said he also checked to see what was holding the ship on the rocks at Kendrick Bay near the southern end of Prince of Wales Island in Alaska. His diving team discovered that a mast had held the ship on the rocks and while he was inside the vessel it had broken away.

After he realized the ship was adrift, he told the coast guard he would attach a line to the wreck and it was towed out to sea where it sank later.

Hansen said in reply to questions from coroner Harold Murphy that nothing he saw showed the Lee Wang Zin had made impact with the bottom while it was under way.

But he agreed later with speculation the vessel could have struck Celestial Reef north of the Queen Charlottes, capsizing to port with the port side of the ship being ripped away by pounding against the reef.

"That's just a supposition," he added. "It's the best explanation I can come up with at this time."

He also said the crew may have tried to lower the lifeboat on the starboard side, but the ship capsized too fast.

Hansen said he went out to Celestial Reef, in Canadian waters in Dixon Entrance, early in January to search for remains of the ship but to his astonishment could not find the reef.

There is no marker on the reef, he said.

Retirement to become too costly

KELOWNA (CP) — Inflation is reducing the true value of pensions to the point where some workers might not be able to afford retirement, Ken Dye, president of the Institute of Chartered Accountants of B.C., said here Wednesday.

Retired people, especially those in the private sector, often receive an income worth a fraction of its value when their pension plans began, because the plans were not indexed, Dye told the Chamber of Commerce.

Dye said it is unlikely that private employers will move quickly to index company pensions because it would strain corporate treasuries. Private employers are not going to agree to open-ended indexing because they cannot be guaranteed that pension fund earnings will keep up with inflation and rising costs.

Racing report to gov't

A study of the horse racing industry in B.C. has been completed and is in the hands of the government, Attorney-General Allan Williams said Wednesday.

"I will discuss it with my people, probably this week, and it will be made public," Williams said.

The study, conducted by the attorney-general's, finance and industry ministries and the B.C. Racing Commission, was to examine the implications of varying the level of provincial taxation and the possibility of applying sales tax in transactions involving claiming horses.

Often horses are claimed several times in one racing season, and at present are taxed on each sale.

Also under review was Sunday racing, banned by the Muncipal Act and the Vancouver city charter, the length of racing seasons and the setting of racing dates, and methods of subsidizing owners and breeders to improve their stock.

DID YOU KNOW?
The Unborn Child IS a Live Human

By 18 days after conception the baby's heart is beating.

By 43 days he has brain waves, by 8 weeks he squints and his lips respond to gentle touch.

By 11 weeks he breathes, swallows, urinates and is very sensitive to pain.

The UN Declaration of Human Rights (which Canada signed) states "the child needs legal protection before as well as after birth."

The WHO Physician's Code states "I will maintain the utmost respect for human life from the time of conception."

But our legislators have brought us to the point where only unborn children are liable for the death penalty only because their mothers don't want them.

Let us restore to born babies their human rights.

Trudeau jousts with Webster

TOUCH UP JOB by a make-up woman at the B.C. Television studio in Burnaby draws a few laughs from Liberal Leader Pierre Trudeau moments before he began sparring with Jack Webster on his talk show Wednesday.

BURNABY (CP) — It was billed by election scribes hoping for some exciting copy as the Oatmeal Savage versus the Shadow.

Liberal Leader Pierre Trudeau, who has been accused of playing hide-and-seek during the current election campaign and of refusing to detail his party's programs, went Wednesday to beard the Savage in his den.

The Oatmeal Savage is Jack Webster, a gruff Scot with a reputation for eating his interview subjects for breakfast on his BCTV morning talk show.

The news media had been anticipating a real scrap, before a television audience of 250,000 scattered throughout B.C. and the North. They were looking for Webster to make the former prime minister open up on election issues.

But, unlike some Webester guests left reeling on the ropes, a spirited Trudeau stood his ground and defended Liberal approaches to the election campaign.

ELECTION 80

Webster, who noted Prime Minister Clark has been called a wimp and Trudeau has earned the nickname of The Shadow, growled that the election will be won on image and style.

"If it is fought on that basis, it's because you and the media are putting it on that basis," retorted Trudeau.

"I have discussed the issues and . . . from the outset I've said this isn't a personality fight."

Webster: "This is a (Liberal) team?"

Trudeau: "Not only is this a team but this is a campaign I want to see fought on issues."

Webster: "But you lost your team."

Trudeau: "How do you mean I lost my team . . . Art Phillips, Peter Pearse, Gordon Gibson (B.C. Liberal candidates) . . ."

Webster: "Your senior team."

Trudeau: "Oh, you mean those that you were calling dinosaurs when they were in the team?

"When we have a great cabinet, you say these are all old men and women . . . and they should be replaced by some of the younger people."

Trudeau added that when the senior members of the team decide to retire, the media claims the party has lost its best men.

The interview turned to a variety of other subjects, including the Conservatives' proposed 18-cent-a-gallon increase in the excise tax on gasoline.

Trudeau said the excise tax would hurt all Canadians and would only cover the cost of the Conservative mortgage tax credit plan which would benefit only a minority of Canadians.

The costs of the tax and the mortgage plan became the subject of a heated argument, during which a stammering Trudeau became somewhat flustered.

Later, Webster tried to pry a retraction from Trudeau on the Liberal pledge to double-track the Canadian National Railways line from Winnipeg to Vancouver.

Webster: "You would find it damned difficult to double track because where it comes through the Rockies they've got railways on each side."

Trudeau: "Well, you sound like those who in the 19th century were saying you can't go through those Rockies with one track, let alone two."

Trudeau, who said the interview was his 12th of the campaign compared with only 10 in the last election, also defended his failure to appear at a B.C. Liberal party policy conference last November when he was photographed at a disco in New York.

The former prime minister said "I never accepted to come to a Liberal (function) on the coast," and added that "people hope that I'm going to be everywhere."

Final PC pitch in Ontario

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Progressive Conservative organizers turned out the troops in full force Wednesday as Joe Clark raced through southwestern Ontario, pleading with voters not to return to the Liberal fold.

At enthusiastic rallies attended by more than 1,000 here and in Niagara Falls, Ont., Clark accused Liberal Leader Pierre Trudeau of running a non-campaign because he takes it for granted that voters who abandoned him in the May 22 election will return to their accustomed place Monday.

"He is trying to have your confidence without earning your confidence," the prime minister told the cheering, banner-waving crowds. "I believe that displays contempt for Canadian voters and for Canadian democracy."

Clark labelled Trudeau the "silent man" and urged voters help "fulfil Mr. Trudeau's desire to retire." Trudeau announced Nov. 21 he wanted to resign as Liberal leader but changed his mind after the government was defeated in the Commons in December and his party urged him to reconsider.

The Progressive Conservatives captured 57 of Ontario's 95 seats May 22 as they made big gains from the Liberals. The survival of Clark's young government depends on finding some way to reverse opinion polls showing his party badly trailing the Liberals in the province.

Conservative organizers say they plan big rallies all week to help give workers a last bit of inspiration and give the impression the party is gathering momentum.

The Conservatives are trying to topple former Liberal cabinet minister Judd Buchanan in London West, where they came within 500 votes of beating him last time, and to hold onto Niagara Falls and Lincoln, traditionally Liberal ridings which went went Tory with the national trend in May.

Clark's final week speeches have developed a routine. They attack Trudeau and the Liberals for failing to talk about issues in the campaign, particularly energy prices, and explain Conservative proposals to make the country less dependent on imported oil.

The prime minister also describes Conservative efforts at reducing government spending and his strong stand on foreign policy issues, specifically actions his government has taken against the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

Tory PetroCan stances leave Broadbent skeptical

SASKATOON (CP) — New Democratic Party Leader Ed Broadbent endorses Progressive Conservative proposals to give Petro-Canada the muscle to buy multinational oil companies and to make the state-owned firm's gasoline outlets in Western Canada more visible.

However, Broadbent did so grudgingly Wednesday, expressing skepticism and telling about 2,200 supporters that a succession of Conservative policies on Petro-Canada in the last year has bewildered him.

The NDP leader made it clear he still opposes Conservative plans to give away half of the firm's shares to the public and believes the company should be given even more muscle than Energy Minister Ray Hnatyshyn is proposing.

Hnatyshyn, seeking reelection in Saskatoon West riding, where the NDP leader spoke Wednesday night, was singled out for attack on the grounds he won't publicly debate his Petro-Canada policies with NDP candidate Reg Parker, who lost to him by about 5,000 votes in the May 22 election.

The crowd burst into applause when Broadbent declared the NDP would make Petro-Canada the country's exclusive importer of oil, the only developper of the Alberta oil sands at cost and would rename its Pacific 66 gas stations in the West "Petro-Canada" and stick a red Maple Leaf on each one.

"I am always bewildered by the Conservatives on Petro-Canada," Broadbent said. "I thought of the variations that they went through in the last year had finally stopped.

"One day, it was a turkey for Mr. (Prime Minister) Clark. Another day, it was a half turkey. The third day, he was going to give it away. The fourth day, he was going to sell half of it. The fifth day, he was going to do half of one and half of the other."

Broadbent also discredited Liberals advertising claims it alone is responsible for creating Petro-Canada.

He referred to the 1972-74 Parliament, in which the NDP held the balance of power under a Liberal minority government, and made the creation of Petro-Canada a condition for continued support for the Liberals.

Broadbent campaigns today in Winnipeg and St. Catharines, Ont.

John explains the smell - they were smelling john

TERRACE (CP) — Environment Minister John Fraser encountered a local air pollution problem at a political meeting at a hotel here and told Progressive Conservative supporters that environmental concerns are always with us.

Before Fraser got a chance to address the rally for Al Sheppard, Conservative candidate for Skeena, he was asked as minister responsible for the environment if he couldn't do something about the overpowering air freshener which had just been sprayed in the room.

Fraser said a dinner companion had complained about an unpleasant odor in the building. While Fraser was not specific about the cause of the problem, related to a plugged toilet in the hotel, he said it did nothing to enhance dinner.

"The smell that we are smelling," Fraser told the audience, "is better, I am assured, than the smell we would be smelling if we did not smell the smell we are smelling."

CRD postpones decision on transit financing

The Capital Regional District board will hold a special meeting March 5 to decide how to finance the estimated $2 million annual deficit after the district takes over public transit on April 1.

The decision on whether to levy an extra three cents per gallon on gasoline and diesel fuel, or pick up the deficit through a surcharge on hydro bills or through property taxes, was to have been made Feb. 27.

After lengthy debate on Wednesday directors decided to wait longer — until after it receives a report from the Urban Transit Authority (UTA) on March 4 giving details of routes, services and schedules proposed for the outlying areas.

Salt Spring Island director Yvette Valcourt had moved that Salt Spring be excluded from the urban transit area, saying that a newspaper survey carried out on the island had resulted in 767 people opposing an extra gas tax to cover transit deficits. Three people were in favor, she said.

Board chairman Jim Campbell said he had seen the newspaper questionnaire and it had said: "Are you in favor of paying a gas tax for a bus service in downtown Victoria — or words to that effect."

Esquimalt mayor Ken Hill said he hoped there will be a good bus service from Swartz Bay to downtown Victoria, similar to that between Tsawwassen and Vancouver, that would benefit Gulf Islands residents.

Valcourt tabled her motion after transit committee chairman, Mayor Norma Sealey of Sidney, said it was "totally and completely inappropriate" to consider Salt Spring's opting out until after the UTA report is received.

"To say they are not being provided for is garbage."

The CRD has decided that the whole regional district will be the transit area with all components helping to pay the deficit.

But city director, Ald. Bob Wright, contended the CRD should perhaps allow opting out.

"We're ramming it down some of the electoral areas' throats," he said.

Campbell noted that any opting out would require lengthy procedures that could not be completed before the takeover date.

"I think you're in it for the initial stage ... maybe later," he told Valcourt.

The board also decided to hire a chief transit planner to head a specially-created transit department but not before strong objections were made by Central Saanich director Dave Hill.

He said it didn't need a staff of five "to run routes all over the municipalities."

Ald. Bill McElroy, however, said it was a question of $30,000 false economy to run a $13 million project.

"EVEN THE BUS STOPS AT SAM'S DOOR"

'Bigot' issue puts meetings on the record

Future committee and board meetings of the Capital Regional District will be recorded and the recordings kept for at least six months.

The board decided to make the move Wednesday after Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier claimed he had been the subject of malicious distortion and unprofessional reporting.

He was referring to a recent story in which two newspaper reporters and one television reporter quoted him as saying "nigger, black and pregnant?" after board chairman Jim Campbell had said he was not in favor of "token women".

Couvelier denies he said "nigger" but does not deny he said black or pregnant.

The incident occurred during a meeting of the economic development committee, which is chaired by Couvelier.

He said politicians are entitled to have their reputation left intact.

Couvelier said he is offended by the implication that he is a racist bigot.

Couvelier had referred to a letter Saanich council had received from the Women's Employment Committee, stating women should be represented on the proposed economic development commission.

Langwood Centre needed: trustees

Sooke school board chairman Irene Lane said today trustees support parents who are fighting the March 31 closure of Langwood Activity Centre for the mentally handicapped.

The school district does not provide operating funds for the centre, but about one third of the youngsters who leave Dogwood School for handicapped students attend the centre to continue learning life skills.

Lane said the threat of closure causes concern comparable to losing the university as an option for high school graduates.

The sheltered workshop is operated by the Capital Region Association for the Mentally Handicapped, which said it can not support the deficit estimated at $33,000 in the forthcoming year.

A subsidy of 73 cents an hour per person working at the centre is paid by the provincial ministry of human resources, but it covers only part of the day and does not apply to handicapped who are not producing.

Peggy Burrell, one of two paid full-time staff, said production is secondary to the teaching of life skills, communication, basic academics, responsibility, maintaining and upgrading people of limited capacity to be useful.

"We're saying (the government subsidy) is not really appropriate funding," she said.

For some parents, with children attending Langwood who are long past normal school age, there are no alternative places.

Langwood takes people from 19 and up, but most of some 20 who attend are in their 30s, the oldest about 55.

They have concentrated on making planter boxes for commercial sale, but if the centre survives Burrell said a new project probably would be chosen that would take advantage of the skills already mastered.

The shop opened in 1973. Besides the full-time staff there is one half-time person and several part-time volunteers.

THE COMMERCE R.S.P. BLUE RIBBON RATE

TAKE AN INTEREST IN YOUR FUTURE.
A Commerce R.S.P. is more than a savings plan with tax benefits. It's a wise investment.

With a Commerce Retirement Savings Plan you gain an income tax deduction today, while providing an income for your retirement tomorrow. Annual maximum contributions vary, but our branch personnel can help you calculate your personal contribution limit.

MAKE THE MOST OF YOUR TAX SAVINGS.
If you don't have the money right now to set up a Commerce R.S.P., it could be to your advantage to borrow money to put into your Plan. Not only will you be able to deduct your contribution from your taxable income, but you'll also be able to claim the interest on your loan as a deductible item for the year that it's paid.

If you're married, it may be to your advantage to put part or all of your allowable contribution into an R.S.P. for your Spouse, and deduct that contribution from your earned income. Loan interest is not tax deductible on loans for a spousal R.S.P.

MAKE EASY MONTHLY CONTRIBUTIONS.
You may find it easier to contribute on a monthly basis to your R.S.P., instead of making a lump sum payment. If so, you can take advantage of the Commerce STEPS program, ("Start Twelve Easy Payments and Save"). It's a simple way to make "easy to handle" monthly payments. And for your added convenience, we can automatically withdraw your R.S.P. contributions from any one of your accounts at any financial institution in Canada.

TODAY'S THE DAY TO START YOUR R.S.P.
The deadline for 1979 Tax Year Contributions is February 29, 1980, so drop in to any Commerce branch today to start your R.S.P. Chances are, you won't have to go far to find one. Our Bank will welcome you at more branches than any other bank in Canada.

*ANNUAL INTEREST IS CALCULATED ON THE MINIMUM MONTHLY BALANCE, COMPOUNDED SEMI-ANNUALLY, AND THE RATE IS SUBJECT TO CHANGE WITHOUT NOTICE.

Petrocan shopping for oil

VANCOUVER (CP) — Petro-Canada officials are shopping for oil supplies in Mexico and Venezuela this week in an apparent reversal of previous Progressive Conservative government policy barring the Crown corporation from conducting international oil transactions.

Wilbert Hopper, the Crown corporation's president, and Ian Stewart, deputy energy minister, have gone to carry on discussions about oil transactions, Energy Minister Ray Hnatyshyn confirmed Tuesday.

"Since I could not go, I considered it appropriate to send officials to continue the discussions," the minister said, noting he had planned to go last month but the election intervened.

Hopper said last July that he had been ordered not to involve his company in international oil deals.

Hnatyshyn explained that Canadian inventories have been below secure levels recently and that Petro-Canada now was involved in the buildup of supplies.

Meanwhile, a corporation official in Ottawa says Canada has been lucky to have avoided rationing this winter. Unusually mild Canadian weather from November through January protected Canada's limited reserves of crude oil, heating oil and engine fuels, he said.

"Inventories are fairly good now in heating oils and diesel," he said. "We had to buy some at high prices.

"We had to look at some luck to get us through."

Under the previous Liberal government, the corporation and president Hopper were part of the initialling of an agreement with the government of Mexico for a nation-to-nation deal including the import of some Mexican crude to Canada.

However, after the Liberals defeat May 22, the new cabinet of Prime Minister Joe Clark declared that the corporation would have to scale down its operations in anticipation of a review of the corporation's activities.

Swastika found on burned synagogue

EDMONTON (CP) — A single, roughly-drawn swastika was found at the scene of a fire police say was deliberately set at the Beth Shalom Synagogue in Edmonton Wednesday.

The fire destroyed priceless religious manuscripts and damage was estimated at about $1 million.

Six sheepskin Torah scrolls — one more than 150 years old — were burned when flames swept through the Synagogue's sanctuary area.

Advice to keep quiet against CP Rail rules

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (CP) — A CP Rail official who warned a colleague not to talk about parts of a faulty journal bearing found shortly after the Nov. 10 derailment of a CP Rail train was not conforming to proper emergency procedures, a company official said Wednesday.

Testifying at a royal commission into the accident, John Kelsall, superintendent of CP Rail's Sudbury division, said that after treating injured persons and reporting an accident, an employee is required to search for the cause and inform company investigators.

But Peel Regional Police constable Elliot McConnell testified earlier that he overheard a CP Rail official tell a co-worker "not to say too much over the radio about this" after they found a burned-off journal stub. Earlier evidence indicated it was part of an overheated journal bearing that caused the accident.

"I don't know why he'd say that," Kelsall said. "It's not in conformity with instructions."

Later, John Cannings, lawyer for train manufacturer Hawker Siddeley Canada Ltd., complained to commission chairman Mr. Justice Samuel Grange of the Ontario Supreme Court about difficulty in acquiring relevant documents, copies of exhibits and advance notice of prospective witnesses.

He said he sent a letter to CP Rail requesting copies of more than 30 documents relating to the installation, location and efficiency record of hot box detectors Cannings said he received no reply to his request.

Two-front attack on dental fees?

The general manager of CU&C Health Services said today he will recommend to his board of directors that it launch action on two fronts against a 12-per-cent fee hike announced by the College of Dental Surgeons of B.C.

David Schreck said lawyers have told him the board can file a complaint under the Combines Act and also take civil action.

Schreck said he expects the board will support his position.

Health Minister Rafe Mair said Wednesday there is nothing the province can do to prevent the college from raising its fees by 12 per cent.

When the government begins its promised Denticare program, Mair said, it will get into the business of negotiating dentists' rates.

"But until we do, I think it would be wrong to comment on negotiations between freely contracting parties."

Schreck Wednesday called the college a "powerful monopoly" and said CU&C objects to its policy of establishing a fee schedule without outside negotiations.

Dr. Ted Ramage, spokesman for the College of Dental Surgeons, said, however, the college sets a fee guide, not a schedule and dentists follow it at their own choice.

But Schreck says almost every dentist in the province follows the guide when billing CU&C.

Ramage said the guide is prepared by an economist after all the dentists in the province have been surveyed.

"We feel it's fair and relates directly to our costs," he said.

Mair said he can only assume the fee increase is warranted.

He also said the increased burden on the consumer will not move him to press harder for Denticare because he is already pressing as hard as he can.

"I want it to come in as soon as possible in any event, so I don't think that gives me any extra push."

Premier Bill Bennett has made it clear the scheme will not begin this spring as orginally planned.

Schreck said CU&C has tried unsuccessfully to meet with Mair about problems with the current system of dental billing.

He said CU&C would like to see two dental bodies, one to represent the public interest and one to represent the dentists' interest.

Churches to host music tour

A musical tour of three Victoria churches will be made Saturday and Sunday by choirs and a chamber orchestra from Seattle University.

The groups will present a concert of sacred and secular music Saturday in Christ Church Cathedral at 8 p.m. Before this concert they will assist at St. Andrew's Cathedral's 5 p.m. liturgy where they will perform traditional hymns with the congregation as well as works by Gabrieli, Scarlatti and Purcell.

Sunday morning they will provide the music for the 9:30 Mass at St. Patrick's Church.

Loffmark wins court fight to regain his MLA pension

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ralph Loffmark, a former Social Credit health minister, has won a B.C. Supreme Court battle to regain a $546-a-month pension he lost last year after endorsing NDP leader Dave Barrett.

However, the University of B.C. commerce professor wasn't rejoicing in his victory Wednesday night.

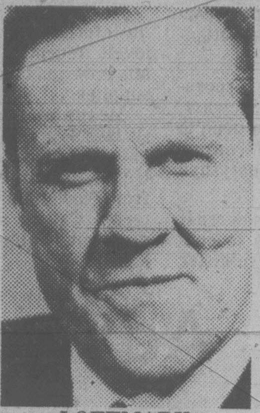
"I am sorry and very regretful I had to go to court on the thing," he said. "Otherwise, I have no comment."

Loffmark, who quit politics in 1975, also declined to comment on what he will do if lawyers in Attorney-General Allan Williams' ministry decide to appeal the decision.

Mr. Justice Kirke Smith decided that superannuation commissioner J. D. Reid erred in law when cutting Loffmark's pension to $96 a month last July.

The superannuation branch had said Loffmark's pension was slashed because of his salary from UBC, which receives funding from Victoria.

Loffmark had been receiving his pension for almost 4½ years but the government asked him to repay $20,000, he received. Reid's decision also meant he would have lost $30,000 during the next six years.



LOFFMARK
. . . sorry he had to sue

The judge said that if the Legislative Assembly Allowance and Superannuation Act was followed literally it would "virtually prohibit employment of a retired legislator by any provincially-incorporated company, society or co-operative association without pension reduction."

He said the law must be read in context and this must be taken as applying only to Crown corporations and agencies funded exclusively by the province.

UBC gets an annual government grant but that is only part of its income.

A Massachusetts legislator who had rhodonite declared as the official state gem and cod the state fish now wants to make a set of dinosaur footprints the official state fossil. "The people who want this legislation are not a bunch of whackos, space shots, flakes or dummies," said Representative Frank Matrango of North Adams. A companion bill asks that the whale become the official state marine mammal.

Conductor Colin Davis, music director of the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden, has been knighted by Queen Elizabeth at Buckingham Palace. He leaves shortly for a month's engagement in Boston where he is principal guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Silverheels

Actor Jay Silverheels, who last year became the first Indian to have a star placed in Hollywood's Walk of Fame, has been bedridden with a combination of illnesses, the Motion Picture and Television Country Hospital reported. Officials of the facility said the 62-year-old Silverheels, a Mohawk from Ontario, is suffering from heart and other problems. He was taken to hospital last year during his recovery from a stroke. Silverheels is best known for his portrayal of Tonto in the long-running Lone Ranger TV series.

The playwright Neil Simon's daughter, Ellen, will be married, along with 13 other couples who are followers of Swami Mukhtananda, in a traditional Indian ceremony today performed by the spiritual leader. Miss Simon, 22, is marrying Jon Leland, an assistant producer at Metromedia, whom she met after becoming a student of the swami at the suggestion of her stepmother, Marsha Mason.

Ken Taylor, Canada's ambassador to Iran, could become the subject of a U.S. movie about his role in helping six U.S. diplomats escape from Iran, Calgary's acting mayor says. "The only problem is that I don't like anybody mentioned to play Ken Taylor," Craig Reid said during a city hall ceremony to present a set of cufflinks to Taylor.

Publisher Hugh Hefner has agreed to pay back $796,413 in benefits to Playboy Enterprises, Inc., that auditors ruled were "not properly documented or approved by corporate action." Four other company officers, including President Derick Daniels, will be paying similar claims.

Dear Abby:

Someone signed Stole One asked how you thought God would feel about a person who steals a Bible out of a hotel room, and you replied, "Nobody needs a Bible as much as the person who would steal one."

Well, Abby, you sure goofed on that one. You should have pointed out that taking a Bible is not stealing! The Bible societies feel they have won a great victory when someone takes a Bible with him. That's the purpose of putting the Bible there in the first place. It is the duty of all good Christians to spread the gospel throughout the world.

I always feel sad when I see an old Bible, good as new, laying in the same place for years, unopened, unread, serving no one.

Please print my letter so the person who took the Bible will know that he is not guilty of stealing.

I took a Bible once and I feel good about it.

C.M.

Dear C.M.:

I've seen many a Bible in many a hotel room, but I've yet to see a sign saying, "Help yourself." Read on for an authoritative view of the subject:

Dear Abby:

As a regular reader of your column in the local newspaper, and a representative of The Gideons International, may I add to your logical reply to Stole One.

The Gideons International is a society of Christian business and professional men -- all members of most evangelical churches of which there are about 80,000 in 124 countries throughout the world.

Every 17 days we place about one million Bibles (or 20 million a year) in the rooms of hotels, motels, hospitals, jails, and other public places in an effort to serve mankind by making the Scriptures available to as many people as possible.

These Bibles are the property of The Gideons, and are paid for by the free-will gifts and offerings of concerned Christians of all denominations.

Of course, we neither encourage nor condone taking the Bibles, but many do, which necessitates replacing a good number of Bibles annually at our expense.

We receive letters from people who confess having taken one of our Bibles; most send a donation along with their apologies.

Confidential to You;

Today is St. Valentine's Day, so be a sweetheart and call someone who's alone and say, "I'm thinking about you." Take some flowers to someone in a nursing home. Put all your discarded clothes in a box for Goodwill. Donate some blood. Pay your dentist bill. Take a homely girl to lunch. Listen to your teenager. Tell your parents you think they're great. Tape a love note on his (or her) mirror. Forgive an enemy. Send a donation to CARE or the Salvation Army. If you love someone, tell him (or her) NOW; don't wait until next Valentine's Day to be a sweetheart again.

Love, Abby

It isn't love — it's limerence

When our two souls stand up erect and strong
Face to face, silent, drawing nigh and nigher,
Until the lengthening wings break into fire at either curving point, — what bitter wrong
Can the earth do us, that we should not long
Be here contented? Think! In mounting higher,
The angels would press on us, and aspire
To drop some golden orb of perfect song
Into our deep, dear silence. Let us stay
Rather on earth, Beloved — where the unfit contrarious moods of men recoil away
And isolate pure spirits, and permit
A place to stand and love in for a day,
With darkness and the death-hour rounding it.

Elizabeth Barrett Browning

The word for St. Valentine's Day isn't love in Dr. Dorothy Tennov's book. It's limerence.

Dr. Tennov is the author of Love and Limerence, inspired by her clinical work and 13 years of research while a University of Bridgeport psychologist.

"I have heard tales rivaling the grand amours of fiction. They ranged from a three-day spree in Naples to a 50-year unrequited yearning," she said in an interview.

What is this thing called limerence?

"It's constantly thinking about him. Planning ways to make him care. Vividly imagining the first sign of reciprocity (a look, word, or touch). Fear of rejection. Wanting him only," she said.

"Limerence is the source of the greatest happiness known to humans. It is also the source of acute suffering and mental anguish."

Many will recognize the state. Songwriters have had a field day with it for ages. Dr. Tennov gave it a name, arbitrarily picking each letter and arriving at "limerence," and not as some might suspect, through the word "limbic," that part of the brain believed to control emotions and sexual behavior.

She calls limerence part of love's continuum. Basically, though, it's the second stop on love's joy ride after the slam-bang of initial attraction. It can last a lifetime. The average duration is six months to two years. It's apparently instinctual, a force toward mating.

Dr. Tennov says limerence is a spur to divorce as well as marriage and prompts some people to even think of suicide. Her research shows it figures in highway accidents and lost work hours. She believes it is implicated in the teen-age pregnancy epidemic.

Limerence affects the young, the old, the sensitive, the insensitive, the loving, the unloving. Ms. Tennov say she experienced limerence at 8.

"Boy crazy," her father, an Estonian tailor who became a schoolteacher, called it in her native Brooklyn, N.Y.

She says you can become limerent only with persons of one gender and you can only become limerent with one person at a time. Marrieds as well as singles can become limerent.

A married 42-year-old mother of two teen-age boys whose husband was indifferent found her ideal on a plane bound for Europe. Bells rang, lights flashed, she told Dr. Tennov in a candid 8-page letter she wrote in longhand after reading about Tennov's initial findings.

Dr. Tennov says limerence doesn't necessarily lead to sexual intimacy and the woman said it hasn't in her relationship. But she said the woman was unquestionably head-over-heels in limerence.

She says limerence is involuntary. Some people never experience it and live normal lives.

"Whether you are lucky enough to enjoy its infinite pleasures or unfortunate enough to be clutched in its agonies, the state of limerence or non-limerence cannot be willed into existence," she said.

While Dr. Tennov was exploring limerence, scholars at Leeds University in Britain were busy with the first major study of the history of Valentine's Day.

Among the findings:

English maidens used to sowed hempseed in churchyards and wore their stockings inside-out and French dukes in the year 1400 founded a "court of love."

Tony Green, lecturer at the university's Institute of Dialect and Folk Studies, said the observance has its origins in the third century with the death of two Christian martyrs, both named Valentine.

"They both happened to be executed during the Lupercalia, a pagan Roman erotic festival in February," Green said. "There was an attempt by the early Christian church to Christianize the festival in honor of St. Valentine, but for which Valentine, nobody knows."

He said research at the university by Pierre Gendre of Neuchatel, Switzerland, showed no direct connection between these early Valentines and today's hearts-and-chocolates celebration.

"There's a huge gap in the evidence between the martyrdom of the second Valentine in 270 A.D. and the year 1400," Green said.

The story picks up in 1400 under the reign of King Charles VI of France when 600 aristocrats led by the duke of Burgundy founded an institution called the Court of Love. They met annually on St. Valentine's Day to attend mass, then eat, drink and make merry. Each was required to make up a song or poem, and the ladies of court awarded a crown of bayleaves to the winner.

Also in the Middle Ages, poets wrote St. Valentine's Day love lyrics, and the festival caught on with the rising bourgeoisie, then artisans and peasants.

"By the 17th century in England, a metropolitan household like that of (diarist) Samuel Pepys was celebrating St. Valentine's Day with gift giving — traditionally stockings or gloves," Green said. "There was also a tradition that the first person you saw would be your Valentine."

Pepys enters this account in his diary for Feb. 14, 1662:

"This morning in comes W. Bowyer, who was my wife's Valentine, she having, at which I made good sport to myself, held her hands all the morning, that she might not see the painters that were at work in gilding my chimney piece and pictures in my dining room."

Green said the 17th and 18th centuries produced strange forms of divination in which maidens would try to conjure up images of their beloved by running around a churchyard 12 times at midnight chanting: "I sow hempseed, hempseed I sow, he that loves me best, come after me and mow," or by putting concoctions of eggs and hempseed under their pillows at night, and by wearing their stockings inside-out.

Handmade Valentine cards first appeared in the mid-18th century and printed versions came 100 years later, the historians say.

Don't ignore those bursitis attacks

By Dr. L. L. COLEMAN

Every three or four months I get an attack of bursitis. The pain is so excruciating that I lose a week or 10 days from work. Is there any way I can find out what causes this and if it can be prevented?

Mr. S.C.

Dear Mr. C.

Although you did not say so, I assume that the painful attacks of bursitis occur in your shoulder. This is the most common site, even though bursitis can occur in the knee, the elbow and in almost any joint in the body.

Bursitis is an inflammation of the bursa, or small sac, which makes possible the free and easy movement of the bones of the body.

A bursa is filled with a lubricating fluid that helps the normal motion and rotation of the bones. When a bursa becomes injured, irritated or inflamed, it begins to swell. The pain, as a protective mechanism, limits the motion of the joint and thus prevents further irritation and injury.

Many people who have repeated attacks of bursitis fall into a special trap that they unwittingly set for themselves. When the painful attack ends they are so happy to be over it that they do nothing about investigating underlying causes of the attack.

In fact, it is at this time that sufferers should thoroughly explore every avenue, to track down the underlying reason for recurrences.

Many cases of bursitis of the knee joint have been reported by joggers. Also, one of the frequently overlooked causes of bursitis is gout. People with a high uric acid content in the blood may delevop stones in the bursa, which produce excruciating pain and limitation of motion.

Calcium deposits in the bursa are commonly found in people with chronic and acute attacks of bursitis. Calcium and uric acid studies may lead to a better understanding of why you develop repeated attacks of bursitis.

It is now possible to inject special dyes into the bursa for the purpose of studying, by X-rays, the joints and the bony structure that surrounds the joints.

With intensive investigation, it is possible to greatly reduce the frequency and severity of your attacks, and it may even eliminate them completely.

Dear Doctor:

I know that smoking isn't any good for the lungs. But can a cigarette cough be bad for the heart?

Mr. A.E.

Dear Mr. E.:

A long-standing cough is nature's explosive way of trying to get rid of an irritant. Certainly, cigarette smoke is such an irritant. Constant hacking can most certainly put extra pressure on the heart. Now that you know this, I hope you will consider giving up your smoking.

"I'm sorry! I guess I didn't see the sign."

Headache: A new peek at an ageless curse

By SANDY ROVNER
The Washington Post

The morning after Eve was created, Adam had a question:

"God," he asked, "what is a headache?"

Dr. Seymour Diamond isn't verifying the quote, but he's fond of telling the story and, for those in the headache-treating business, it says two things: First, if headaches don't go all the way back to Eve, they certainly reach deep into the Stone Age — if nothing else, as in early man clunking his fellow on the noggin.

And second, specialists have found that, indeed, a headache can be a handy — albeit unhealthy — tool for some people at some times.

Probably somewhere close to 50 million people in the U.S. alone spend something like half a billion dollars a year to ease their aching heads. Perhaps as many as half of those — estimates range from 12 to 25 million — get some version of that meanest sick headache of all, the migraine.

Diamond is one of this country's leading headache specialists, and directs his own headache clinic in Chicago. He believes it is the largest in the country, with approximately 35 new patients a week, most of them "desperate, driven men and women . . ."

He has managed to codify more than 100 or so types of headaches into three large groups, writes and lectures extensively and maintains his active clinical practice.

George Bernard Shaw, who suffered terrible headaches, once asked Arctic explorer Fridtjof Nansen if he'd ever tried to find a cure for headaches. The surprised explorer, of course, said no. "Well," Shaw is said to have responded, "that is a most astonishing thing! You have spent your life trying to discover the North Pole which nobody on earth cares tuppence about, and you have never attempted to discover a cure for the headache, which every living person is crying aloud for."

The three basic headache groups Diamond describes are:

— Vascular, including migraine and the exceptionally painful "cluster" headaches. The two are quite different, related only in that they involve the blood vessels in the head. Also, more women get migraines; more men get clusters.

— Muscle contraction, sometimes called psychogenic, the tension headache, which is usually caused by anxiety or depression.

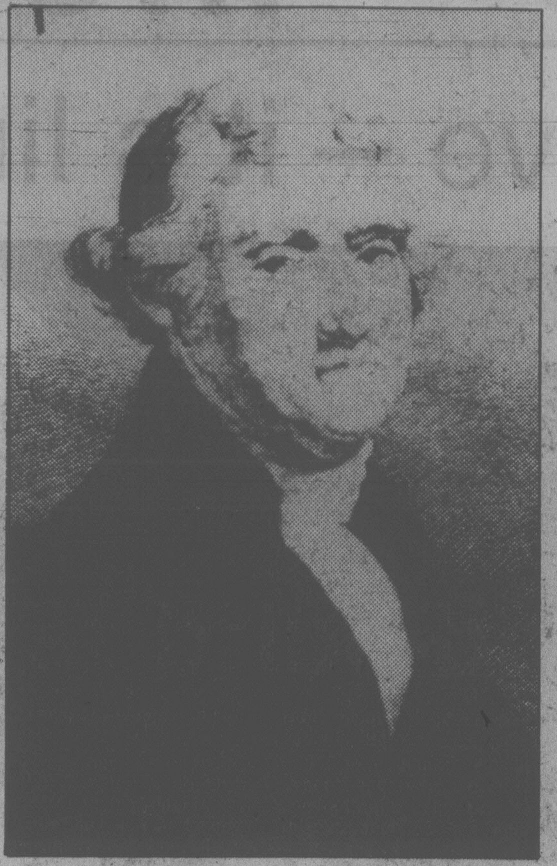
— Traction headaches, which usually have their basis in some organic disease.

By the time the patients get to a clinic like Diamond's, he said recently, "they've really been all around, to 10 or 12 doctors, to all the big clinics . . . They're very resistant. You're dealing with a hard-core patient."

But Diamond's approach to a headache is that of a Columbo-like detective to a knotty murder.

For example, he will leave a chair out of place in the examining room, or a gown laying rumpled across the table. If the patient, almost unconsciously, sets the chair straight or folds the gown, Diamond says that is a major clue pointing to migraine.

If a patient can't exactly remember when he got his headaches, it probably is not migraine. As he wrote in a 1977 paperback, "Patients with migraines know precisely when and how often and how long their headaches strike. They often come in with long lists. When you have a patient with lists, you have a patient with migraine."



Thomas Jefferson wears a look of pain

Migraine, the one-sided headache, was first described, it is believed, in a medical papyrus from about 1500 B.C. The Greek healer Galen referred to the headache as hemicrania (half a head) from which the modern version of the name probably evolved.

Migraine sufferers included Lewis Carroll, whose pre-headache visual hallucinations were reflected in the Tenniel drawings of the weirdly distorted characters down the rabbit hole and through the looking glass. Not all migraines are preceded by auras or prodromes, but they can come in weird and bizarre forms ranging from the fairly common glittering zigzags to grotesque distortions of taste and smell.

A distinct migraine personality was first described in the 1960s. There are, of course, many exceptions. Dr. Diamond uses these personality traits as clues, no more. But the so-called migraine type is often a perfectionist, bright, ambitious, driving and self-demanding. Often compulsively neat, but sometimes, some experts say, just the opposite in a kind of if-I-can't-do-it-right-I-won't-do-it-at-all perversity.

As Dr. Diamond told colleagues at a recent conference on biofeedback techniques — which he has found successful among certain resistant patients for whom nothing else worked — "Migraine sufferers are famous for building environments too great for them to handle . . ."

On the theory that misery loves company, headache doctors including Diamond and Michigan specialist Dr. Joel Saper, like to list notable sufferers, for example: Chopin, Cervantes, Charles Darwin, Thomas Jefferson, Tolstoy, Alfred Nobel, Karl Marx, Edgar Allen Poe, Tchaikovsky, Virginia Woolf.

The constriction and then dilation of blood vessels that actually cause the aura (in a small percentage of sufferers) and then the pain are actually the result of a series of biochemical events in the body that can be set off by such diverse things as changes in atmospheric pressure, certain foods, stress, blood-sugar levels, smoking, menstrual cycles, birth-control pills and post menopausal estrogens.

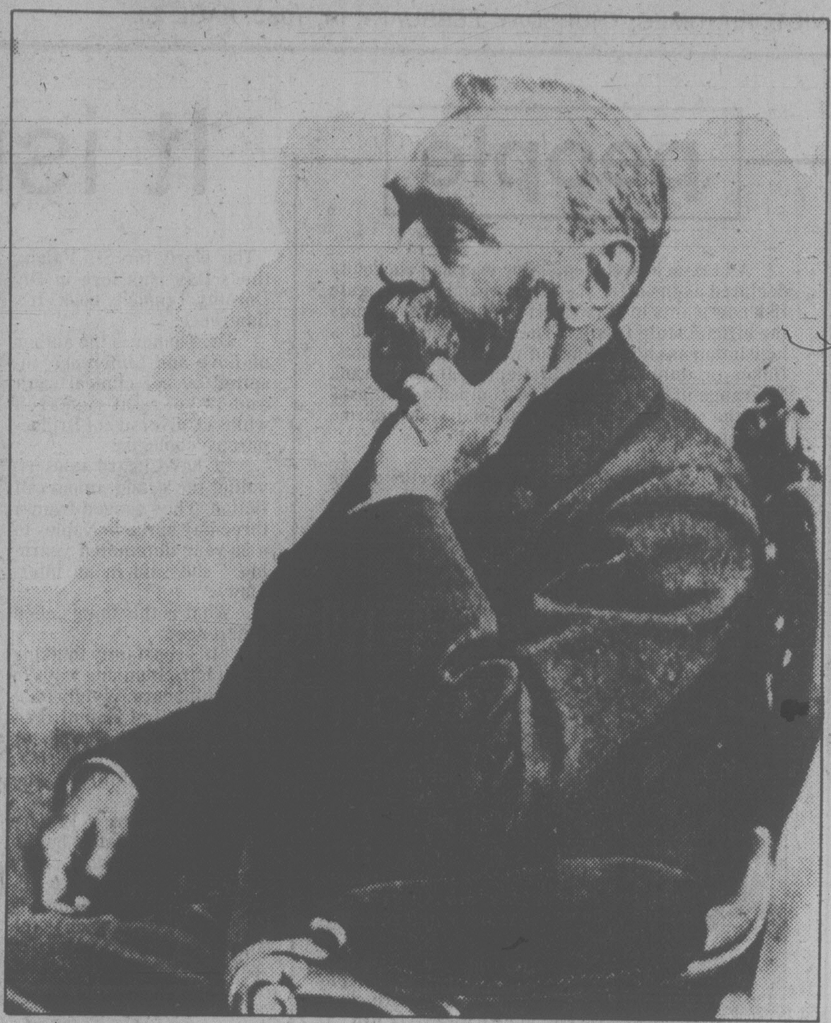
Says Dr. Diamond, "I cure more migraines by stopping estrogens than anything else I do in the office."

Migraines, which often run in families, can be precipitated in some sufferers by any or all of these foods. Dr. Diamond says, which contain chemical substances that are believed to be the culprits:

Ripened cheeses; herring; chocolate; anything fermented, pickled or marinated or cured; sour cream and yogurt; nuts, peanut butter; hot fresh breads, raised coffeecakes and doughnuts; pods of broad beans; foods containing monosodium glutamate; onions, canned figs, citruses, bananas, pizza, pork, excessive tea, coffee, colas; avocado; chicken livers; all alcoholic beverages.

(If you must drink, he suggests sauterne, Riesling, Seagram's VO, Cutty Sark or vodka, limited to two drinks.)

There are also many drugs that may or may not be useful in migraines such as those containing ergot or the just-approved propranolol (Inderal), which is virtually miraculous but cannot be used for everyone.



Alfred Nobel, of Nobel prize fame, was a migraine sufferer

. . . Another theory

By HARRY NELSON
The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — What do most people do when a migraine headache strikes?

Take a pain reliever, of course — or maybe three or four of them.

But a hot shower followed by a sudden cold one would be much more effective in the long run, according to a Los Angeles neurologist who has proposed a radically different treatment of recurring headaches.

Dr. Augustus S. Rose believes that such headaches recur is primarily because the sufferer took pain relievers the last time the headache struck — and the times before that.

So the best treatment, he says, is to stop the pills.

"However devastating recurrent headache may be and however humane it may seem to prescribe analgesia . . .," he told a meeting of physicians recently, "we as physicians, may be adding to the patient's misery."

Rose acknowledges that his views are not well received by many doctors and patients, both of whom appear to rely heavily on the drug approach.

But he is convinced, he says that taking pain relievers virtually assures the recurrence of the headache.

This cure-all doesn't exist

Incredible as it may seem, there's a non-existent vitamin product on the market today that is in great demand. That product is "vitamin B15" or pangamic acid. The products marketed as this vitamin (pangamic acid) are actually varying mixtures of several substances — esters and salts of glucuronic acid, dimethylglycine, glycine (an amino acid), di-isopropylamine, or dichloroacetate and calcium chloride.

Because pangamic acid cannot be defined, it is considered a non-existent substance in the United States and cannot be sold there. In Canada, however, pangamic acid can be sold but no claims may be made either on the bottle or in advertising of its supposed benefits. It is often found in health food stores. But, we found it in an otherwise reputable pharmacy recently, much to our surprise.

Vitamins are organic compounds that we all need in our diets in order to stay healthy. But none of the many substances in pangamic acid has any function as a vitamin. The term "vitamin B15" is a trade name.

Pangamic acid has been promoted as a cure for everything from heart disease, nerve and gland disorders, alcoholism, asthma, high blood cholesterol, emphysema, headaches, insomnia, poor circulation, premature aging, rheumatism, and even shortness of breath. There simply isn't any proof that it is beneficial in the treatment of any of these conditions.

Some of the materials in pangamic acid may also be harmful. Di-isopropylamine acted as a mild sedative and increased blood uric acid levels when it was given to a group of diabetics. One man taking dichloroacetate developed nerve abnormalities; calcium chloride is a well known poison. In addition, dimethylglycine reacts with nitrites to form two cancer-producing nitrosamines.

Vitamine B17, or laetrile, is another controversial non-vitamin. As one report nicely put it, "vitamin B17" contains one or two parts of the sugar-glucose, one part benzaldehyde (a mild poison), one part cyanide (a very potent poison) and no parts vitamin. "Vitamin B17", again, is a trade name. It's probably fortunate that laetrile cannot be sold or promoted in Canada.

Laetrile is a natural poison found in seeds of apples, cherries, pears and plums and nuts sach as almonds; it is especially concentrated in the pits of certain types of bitter apricots. Almond extracts used as flavorings have been treated so that they are not poisonous. Commercial laetrile is taken from apricot pits.

Crushing or chewing apricot pits releases the laetrile. Acid in the stomach, or enzymes found in the plant foods, (especially the pits themselves), or our own cells, release cyanide from the laetrile. The release of the cyanide is speeded up if you are on a vegetarian diet and by taking large doses of vitamin C. Twenty-five to 35 apricot pits, or one gram of laetrile, contain 50-60 milligrams of cyanide, which is the average fatal dose for an adult.

Some of the symptoms of acute poisoning are headache, dizzyness, nausea, difficulty in breathing, convulsions and coma. Chronic poisoning results in muscle weakness and nerve degeneration.

In the twenty-five years that latrile has been promoted as a cancer cure, not a single successful case has been reported.

A little stress is a good thing

By CAROL DEEGAN

NEW YORK (AP) — Stress is important if we're to have some enthusiasm and motivation in our lives, says Rosalind Forbes.

But it's important for each person to know his or her optimal stress level, says the founder of the Forbes Associates Stress Consultants of New York.

"The optimal stress level is the one which got you where you are today in terms of your live and your career," Dr. Forbes said.

She also is the author of two books, Corporate Stress and Life Stress.

"When we do have that optimal stress level, besides being enthusiastic and motivated, stress gives you an energy, it helps you to think more clearly.

"The mental abilities are heightened because of that slight spurt of adrenalin in the body, and that's where the energy comes from, too."

Dr. Forbes said the optimal stress level for optimal performance is a slightly keyed-up feeling. It's the feeling a person may get when he or she goes for a job interview, receives a promotion, or stands up to address a group of peers or employees.

When operating at their optimal stress level, people enjoy contacts with others, tend to get more done in less time, and seem to be able to make better decisions.

"I'm sure that stress can also be debilitating, but we're finding now that if you want to succeed in your career, if you're upwardly mobile, I would say the real secret to success in the position is how well you can deal with the pressure," she said.

Dr. Forbes said that she has found the top level executives were the ones who had the innate ability to handle stress productively, to channel it into their work.

In addition to an optimal stress level, Dr. Forbes said, there also is stress underload, in which there is not enough stimulation or challenge in a person's environment; and stress overload, which is when an individual has too much pressure to handle, and thus cannot function well.

One indication of stress overload would be a change — either an increase or a decrease — in eating, smoking or drinking habits. Causes of pressure, she said, may be a major job change or relocation, a divorce or the end of a long-term relationship.

"It's a total accumulation of these events that makes it difficult for us to cope and deal with day-to-day pressure."

And what about stress underload? Dr. Forbes said the signs of too little pressure or stimulation may include the following:

— Feeling that you are over-qualified or have been over-qualified for the jobs you've held.

— Feeling that the jobs you've had in the past did not have the stimulation, challenge or creativity that you need.

— Feeling that you've reached a plateau in a career, maybe gone as far as you can, and feeling that there are no more goals, no more slots to move into as far as advancement is concerned.

How does a person recognize stress underload?

"One of the things we notice is the individual feels tired a lot," she said.

"We also know that people with this underload situation complain of insomnia, difficulty sleeping at night, strained relationships at home and at work.

Picky eating good for kids

CAMBRIDGE, Ont. (CP) — Children who are regarded as picky eaters are probably doing the best thing possible for themselves, says a fitness co-ordinator for the YWCA.

Lynn Ballantine, who is planning a course for parents of obese children, says many adults tend to reward children with fattening foods.

"If a child is good or does something we ask, we give them a treat," she says. "And we tend to think that a child who eats a lot is somehow healthier or better."

Ms. Ballantine says peculiar attitudes of parents and a lack of education in nutrition can also result in children becoming obese.

"Many mothers say to themselves, 'I'm overweight and therefore my child should be.' Eating habits are passed on to children at an early age."

She says forcing a child to eat more than he wants won't make him fat, but forcing him to eat more than he needs will.

Parents should start telling their children at age four or five that overeating makes them fat, she says.

"Don't nag them or put them down. Encourage them not to lose self-control."

Driveways a danger

OTTAWA (CP) — Children under five years old are mostly likely to be hit by a car in or near their own driveway, says the Traffic Injury Research Foundation of Canada.

That grim picture was drawn by the foundation after looking at 452 child pedestrians between one and 14 years old who died in collisions between 1973 and 1976.

The health department reports that road accidents are one of the leading causes of death among children.

"Yet," the foundation says, "methods to protect children have been slow to develop."

The foundation is an independent agency studying the behavioral and medical aspects of road safety.

The report studies three groups of children: Those between one and four years old (135); between five and seven (153), and those between eight and 14 (164).

Fatal collisions in the first group are most likely to occur during the daytime and in the summer, the study says.

"Characteristically, the child is playing behind a parked vehicle, either in a driveway or very near to it . . . .

"For example, the situation involving very young children is often the regrettable one in which a car is started up in the driveway and simply backs over the child."

Children aged five to seven are usually hit on the way to or from school, says the report.

The older youths are generally hit at night or on the weekend and during the winter months. The accident generally occurs when the child is walking beside a highway.

It would help if the child wore bright or deflective clothing, the report suggests.

Even for the five to seven year olds, "it may be that a concentrated effort is needed in safety instruction to children at this early age."

Hydro picks line route

The provincial government has chosen the Sakinaw Lake route across the Sechelt Peninsula for B.C. Hydro's 500-kilovolt Cheekye-Dunsmuire transmission line to Vancouver Island.

The decision of the Environment and Land Use Committee of cabinet clears the way for a start of construction. The line is to be completed by 1983.

Environment Minister Stephen Rogers said ELUC felt the Sakinaw Lake crossing presented fewer environmental and social problems than the other proposed route, between Sakinaw and Ruby lakes.

It will be less visible to the general public, will have a less direct impact on private property and is also three kilometres shorter and therefore $2.6 million cheaper, he said.

His reasoning is unlikely to appeal to Sunshine Coast residents who object to either route and who have been demanding reconsideration of the entire project.

The decision on a route comes after months of protests and lobbying.

Rogers said B.C. Hydro has been directed to use the utmost care in clearing the right-of-way because of the "sensitive environmental qualities" of the terrain.

Douks anxious to face Holt

Times News Services

NELSON — The 19 Sons of Freedom whose arson trial concluded Wednesday are satisfied that a confidential police file absolves them of any blame in the 1924 death of Doukhobor leader Peter the Lordly.

But they still want a chance to face writer-politician Simma Holt. Freedomites, the most radical of the Doukhobor sects, believe that Mrs. Holt's book, Terror in the Name of God, accuses them of being involved in the explosion which killed Peter (Lordly) Verigin, the first Doukhobor leader in Canada.

Provincial Court Judge Richard D'Andrea reserved decision until March 14 on the arson charges, laid after a CP Rail shed was burned Sept. 30 at South Slocan, about 25 kilometres west of Nelson.

Although the trial involved the arson charges, the side issue of the role Freedomites allegedly played in Lordly's death became its focus.

In the years since Lordly's death, members of the splinter Freedomite group have said they dynamite and burn railway property to strike back at the CPR. Freedomites say they believe the railway was involved because Lordly's car was uncoupled from the rest of the train just before the explosion.

Outside court, defence lawer Jim Hogan said the 19 are happy that the trial allowed the facts of the 1924 police file to come out.

Parts of the report were read in court Tuesday, and both Hogan and Crown counsel Nils Jensen agreed that the file did not support Mrs. Holt's conclusion that Lordly's successor and son, Peter (Chiastikov) Verigin worked from Russia to arrange his father's murder.

The Freedomites still want the issue resolved and are said to be considering ways to have Holt appear before a special committee formed last year by the attorney-general's department to find solutions to Doukhobor problems.

Logging decision 'political'

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Islands Protection Society on the Queen Charlottes says a decision by Forests Minister Tom Waterland to halt steep-slope logging temporarily contradicts past forest service policy and is political.

Waterland said Wednesday in an interview from Victoria that his decision reflects "no policy change at all."

Waterland said Tuesday that steep-slope logging in Charlottes will be halted until techniques are developed to prevent mud slides capable of damaging salmon spawning grounds.

Dan Bowditch, a society director, said Waterland's decision contradicts what the forest service originally thought was correct.

"It's really a political statement by Waterland," he said.

Ship captain, pilot blamed for crash

VANCOUVER (UPC) — A Japanese captain and a B.C. Pilotage Authority pilot must shoulder most of the blame for last October's ramming of a rail bridge by a 16,000-tonne freighter, a department of transport report says.

The report, released Wednesday, places most of the blame for the accident in heavy fog on the pair's decision to sail despite the poor visibility.

The five-page report said the decision was "contrary to the practices of good seamanship," adding that improper use of the radar system on board the vessel also appeared to contribute to the incident.

The collision knocked out the vital rail link with Vancouver harbor's north shore operations and caused more than $6-million damage to the bridge.

The report said the pilot, Merril Jones, whose job it was to guide the vessel out of Vancouver waters, and Capt. Kanane Kamada, decided to try leaving port despite the heavy fog.

They had made arrangements to anchor the ship for the night at a nearby anchorage if the visibility became dangerously poor, the report said.

"As the vessel went down the harbor, visibility closed in to about 30 metres, despite which the Japan Erica did not go to anchorage but continued on her passage through the Narrows and towards the bridge."

Jones has been reprimanded, but will not lose his job.

CUSO APPEAL FOR KAMPUCHEAN REFUGEES

CUSO is preparing to organize and operate a camp of 15,000 Kampuchean refugees in Northern Thailand. Our aim is to encourage local Thai participation and support the efforts of the refugees themselves in dealing with this desperate situation. The camp will provide:

shelter,
water for drinking and irrigation, agricultural supplies, employment training

The cost of this rehabilitation program is based on 50 cents per person per day. CUSO needs $300,000 from Canadians. Funds are also being raised in Thailand.

There are over one million homeless men, women and children spread out along the entire length of the Thailand/Kampuchean border. Your donation will help them to help themselves.

Will you help the Kampuchean Refugees?

Please make cheque payable to CUSO, Kampuchean Refugee Appeal.

I enclose $ ____________ Thank You.

Big-hearted Howie off for fund

The old song You've Gotta Have Heart might have been written for veteran Victoria marathoner Al Howie, who took off this morning on his own personal Valentine run for the B.C. Heart Fund.

Clutching letters from Victoria Mayor Bill Tindall to other mayors, Howie first trotted off to Sidney to see Mayor Norma Sealey.

Then to Swartz Bay, a ferry ride to Fulford Harbour and a run to Ganges, where the Salt Spring Island Rotary Club (which is handling the Heart Fund campaign) is waiting to say hello.

Howie was then scheduled to head for Vesuvius to catch the ferry to Crofton. From there, he was to run to Duncan for a scheduled hoisting of the Heart Fund flag with Mayor Mike Coleman officially kicking off the campaign there.

Today is the official campaign kickoff and donations can be sent to 1008 Blanshard, Victoria, V8W 2H5.

Volunteer canvassers are still needed. Call 382-4035.

Keenleyside chairs awards

A new bravery awards committee set up by Saanich will be chaired by Dr. Hugh Keenleyside.

Former B.C. Hydro co-chairman, Keenleyside will be joined by members Col. James Stone and ex-Saanich alderman Edith Gunning.

The committee's job is to select examples of bravery by citizens and make award recommendations to council. Municipal police and fire departments had separate systems in the past.

Gunning was on council from 1966 to 1973 and served as chairman of the B.C. section of the Housing Design Council.

Stone, awared the Military Cross in the Second World War, was deputy commissioner of penitentiaries from 1960 to 1973.

Teenager facing Duncan charges

Duncan RCMP have charged a 19-year-old youth with the attempted armed robbery and armed holdup of two stores in Duncan last week.

Kevin Robert Sims appeared in provincial court in Duncan Wednesday and was remanded to Feb. 18 for plea.

He was released on $500 surety bail.

Police said a man armed with a handgun attempted to hold up the Yorktown store but was chased off by the storekeeper, Tung Leung.

A few hous later the bandit entered Chow Bros. store on government and escaped with $510.

Horn virtuoso at Open Space

James MacDonald, a leading artist on the horn, will perform Saturday at 8 p.m. at Open Space, 510 Fort.

The Manitoba-born artist, besides numerous solo appearances, is active in chamber music performance. He co-founded the noted York Winds in 1972 and toured and recorded with them until 1978. He then founded the Toronto Septet and the MacDonald Horn Quartet.

MacDonald's brother, John, is also a horn soloist and they recently appeared together with the Toronto Symphony and on the CBC radio network.

James MacDonald has given master classes across the country and has been horn instructor and chamber music coach at York University for seven years. He also instructs at the Royal Conservatory in Toronto and has taught at the Banff School of Fine Arts.

Admission for Saturday's concert is $2, students and Open Space members, $1.

Rocky II voted most popular

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Rocky II, the top-grossing motion picture last year, has been named the most popular film of 1979 by American moviegoers voting for the first annual American Movie Awards.

The film won the top award given out in a nationally televised ceremony sponsored by the National Association of Theater Owners. The winners were chosen in a poll of people attending movies Jan. 9-13.

None of the show's five top individual winners were present at the ceremony at the Wilshire Theater but two of them — Sally Field and Alan Alda — accepted the honors by remote hookup from film locations in the East.

Alda was named best actor of the year for The Seduction of Joe Tynan and Miss Field won the best actress award for Norma Rae.

Happy Valentines Day to our Honey Bunny.
Love Lee and Dad.

I HEARD SOMEONE CALL you "Sunshine" once; The name fits. Thank you for sharing some of your warm rays with me, even when it's raining. Your smile brings out a rainbow. To RW from BO

I'D LOVE TO TAKE YOU OUT to dine,
But you're so broke, my Valentine.
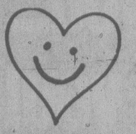
Carl.

JUBILEE BUILDING SUPplies, Love your new building on Keating Crossroad.



Darlene Fawcett
Happy Valentines Day
With Love Nanna & Pappa

ANGUS, IT'S YOU I ADORE, more and more, Since fifty-four. Love, Maggie.

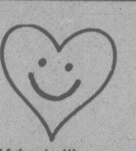
In a Pontiac, Vega, or hot red Camaro, our love is something we share and as you travel down the road of life I promise to always be there. Here's to us, Martindale.

KEVIN, MY DREAMS OF YESterday are our experiences of today, and memories of tomorrow. My memories will be beautiful, Julia.



An old friend with a young heart, Tom.

THE BLUEBELLS AND THE
cowbells chime...
"Will you be my Valentine?"
Johnny.

THE MANY PLEASURES WE have shared during years gone past will "probably" only be exceeded by those anticipated during future days and nights.

Jonye Lou
I love you true,
With all my heart I do.
Jack

AH, MY VALENTINE...
A book of verses underneath the bough,
A jug of wine, a loaf of bread, and thou...
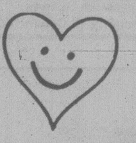
Michael



Florence, dear -
How would you like to star in my memoirs?
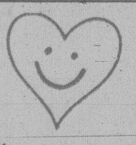
George.

LEE - Read the bedroom wall and know that is so. Me

Lotsa Love to you on Valentines Day, Dad. Love Terese.

To Our Dave with Love, To a beautiful and gentle fowl.



HANK,
The smiling face you see above
Is one my heart wears too;
His cheery grin is just one way
Of showing my love for you.
KRIS, XXOO.

KAREN. ROSES ARE RED. Violets are blue. I sure am glad that I picked you. Love Tim.

We bring lots of love
And research, too.
The "Heart Fund" needs money
For people like you.

Let us be your Valentine.

A RAG, A BONE, AND A HANK of hair,
And the fool he called her his lady fair...
Even as you and I,
Morton.

Brenda A.
Whenever you need me,
Whenever you want me,
You know what to say.
I love you now and ever will,
My love to you for always.
I love you Ron.

Wicky:
First we met
And fell in love,
Then you took me for your wife.
And now that I know
You're by my side,
I feel that you've fulfilled my life.
Love Weeny

When the odds are long, and the game goes wrong,
I'll give you my shoulder to cry on...
Manfred.

DEREK IS MY DASHING
darling,
Always sweet, always charming,
Even when accounts are slow,
He's a pussycat, you know.

HAPPY VALENTINE'S DAY Bucko. J.

HAPPY VALENTINE'S DAY. I love you Judy O. Love Orsk.

I LONG FOR THE LOVE THAT lies
In Caroline's eyes,
And lies, and lies, and lies....
Bert.

I WISH I WERE A KANGAROO,
despite his funny stances,
I'd have a place to put the junk you bring along to dances.
Shorty.

Gail — Thank you for being my love and hope, for standing by me in times of need, for the love we will share in the years to come. John G.

MARJ P.,
B.E.H. want a report in a hurry,
C.D.M. says its overdue,
D.B.T's waiting for a memo
Don't worry Marj, I'll produce for you.
Mike.

MAY I PRINT A KISS ON YOUR lips, Maxine?
With your sweet permission...
We'll go to press, and I rather guess,
We'll print a large edition.
Phil.

MY NEIGHBOUR GETS A
Valentine,
For staying off my party line!
Glen, in Sooke.

NOW I'M WEARING GLASSES,
And I have more scalp than hair,
But you're still looking gorgeous,
It really isn't fair!

RON:
Roses are red,
Violets are blue,
Every since I met you,
Your foot keeps growing fonder
for me,
Laurie.

SHAUN & RYAN — TO THE 2 cutest guys in the whole world. Love, A.D.

Glen, kisses like candy, lips like rubies, all feel so dandy, if you'll be my Pubbies.
All my love Heather.

ATO DAN-ROSES ARE RED, violets are blue, your leg may be broken, but I'll always Love you. Love Fran.

BETTS - IT'S VALENTINES Day, And I love you so. So off to the Keg we both shall go. Love Terry.

C.D.M. - FROM CAIRO WITH Love.

Marlene, we'd be overjoyed
If you'd come home and fill the void.
Love, Mom and Dad.

TO KIMMY AND KATHY,
Some days I feel like I'm a hermit,
Green 'round the gills like good ole Kermit,
But then I see my little Miss
Piggies
And I feel like I should have stood in bed.
So who said had to whyme.
Your Geordie.

Gena and Bon your my valentines. With love, your one and only. — Mom

To my loving Karen,
Happy Valentines Day
Love Ian

B.V.M. "The Kid" loves you Sunshine and will forever.
"Phantom Stranger"

IF WISHES WERE ROSES,
Red, white and yellow,
I'd have no problem...
You'd be my fellow.

YOU WONDER WHY, MY
Valentine,
I never ask you to be mine.
At disco dancing you're sublime,
At kissing you are most divine,
But in the kitchen you do not shine. Bill.

CINDY: YOUR INFATUATION with my be keeps us together happily. Just loving you makes me say. Valentine's is every day.

Happy Valentines Day, Shaoyon, Canada's most exotic but loveable carpenter. Love Ron.

KAREN; LESS THAN TOmorrow, more than yesterday. Love George.

ROSES ARE RED
Violets are blue
Inga loves Sheilah
And I do too.

MOM S. THERE IS NO ONE sweeter than you. Happy Valentines Day. Bill, Diane and family.

This message may be rated
"G",
But my thoughts of you are rated
"X".
G.S.L.

DEAR KEVIN- I LOVE YOU more with each passing day and I'll miss you when you're far away. Love Karen.

CRAIGIE. THINKING OF YOU on this special day and always. Happy Valentines Day. Love Linda.

HAPPY VALENTINES DAY 1980, I'll love ya always. Buddy!

TO MY PARENTS. YOU LIGHT up my life. Love, Adrienne.

DEAR SUGAR COOKIE, JUST to let you know je t'aime.

RAY. ASK ME OUT AND we'll jive for the gold.

ALANA — TO THE MOST beautiful girl in my world who means the most to me. My Love grows for you as the time for us to be united in Love forever. Rick.

TO MY WIFE, GEORGINA-
Who adds to my joys,
Doubles my sorrows,
And triples my expenses!
Charlie.

ROB - There's someone who loves you,
Far more than you know,
With love that keeps growing,
As days come and go.
So remember that always,
Each day the year through,
Someone loves you and needs
you,
That's me and I do!
If I could have one lifetime wish,
One dream that could come true,
I'd pray each day, with all my heart,
To spend my life with you.
All my love, Punkin

TO MY TEDDY BEAR, I LOVE you and it's all your fault. From your little Barbi Doll.

MY DEAREST PAUL. I LOVE you so much. Yours forever, Brenda.

HOPE YOU HAVE A WONDERful Valentine's Day, Nana. Love, Joanne.

MARGARET- SUGAR MAY BE nice, but you are my best. Barry.

FOR VALENTINE'S DAY, give your loved one a treat,
Nor flowers or candy, but something to eat.
At Friar's Fish & Chips where the atmosphere's neat,
We have lots of good things and free treats for your sweet.

To my Ms:
My being away at this time is not very smart,
But my love is with you, and my heart.
My love, sweetheart, is only for
you,
And in your heart you know
that's true.
Loving you always, L.

TO THE SWEETHEARTS OF OCYP: Art, Bobby, Brian, Bud, Dave M, Dave W, Dean, Captain Resthome, Glenn, Grinch, Ken, Lindsay, Mikey, Myrtle, Neil, Pip, Racer, Robin, Ronz. Roses are red, violets are blue, try and guess who, really loves you!

INGRID—WHAT I'VE NEVER been able to express to you through words or actions, maybe this token gesture can tell you of my heart felt feelings for you. Love Mike.

TERJE
& Manfred
Happy VALENTINE'S, love Sue

WE'RE THE CLASSIFIED,
And we'd really like to say,
There is a sort of special man
Who always makes our day,
He comes in on the Friday,
To place his weekend ad
And never leaves til 6:15
Which makes us very mad!
Now we'd like to take this time,
To wish him all the best
And if he makes it out by 5
He'll always be our guest
Happy Valentine's Day, Joe!!!

HANDSOME, MISS YOU VERY much, especially on days like today. Hope to see you soon. Happy Valentines Day. Love, Sunshine.

309 IN MEMORIAM

BURNS - William H., in loving memory of a wonderful father and grandfather who left us Feb. 14, 1979.
Very sadly missed by Sandra, Frank and grandsons Geoffrey and Andrew.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD. AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS

The Lord is my Shepherd
I shall not want
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures
He leadeth me beside the still waters
He restoreth my soul
He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake
Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death
I will fear no evil
For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies
Thou anointest my head with oil
My cup runneth over
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

Sooke school budget up 12%

Sooke School District will spend 11.66 per cent more this year and won't stint on the quality of education, chairman Irene Lane said Wednesday.

The $18.8 million budget approved this week includes $11.39 million for instruction — mainly teacher salaries.

Costs generally are higher, a fact of living which can't be escaped, Lane said. But Sooke believes in high quality education and "teacher salaries and CUPE salaries in general constitute a major part of the budget," she said.

Considering the high price of education, School District 62 budget is within reason and compares with increases in other districts, the chairman said.

Taxpayers might not like it "but I don't think anyone's happy when we have to make cuts."

Sooke district enrolment of 7,963 pupils is about 300 higher than was projected for the current term. The 433 teachers reflect this increase and the budget provides for an additional 4.5 teachers.

The operating portion of the district budget is $16.39 million, a 12.1-per-cent increase from 1979.

It includes an 11 per cent hike for utilities — heat, light and water charges — and about the same for maintenance and transportation.

Weakling has colorful future

There is a tendency among gardeners who grow bedding annuals from seed to buy packets of mixed colors in preference to packets of single colors.

Months later, when the plants come into flower, disappoinment is expressed because the anticipated mixture of four or six colors fails to materialize.

The blame is laid on the seed producer, yet a change of supply source does not produce better results and home gardeners are likely to accuse the seed companies of false advertising.

The fault is really our own. The reason for the poor assortment of colors we obtain from seed mixtures is obvious when we learn something about plants and plant reproduction from seed.

All the flowering annuals we grow started out as wild plants somewhere on the face of this planet and each had a definite color. For example it could have been purple.

Plant scientists discovered a way to split this dominant color, and we now have the same plants in many shades, possible from white, through pinks and reds, to the original purple.

Strange as it may seem, with certain plants this dominant color (purple) will appear in all batches of seeds regardless of the color of the plant that produced the seed, and the seedling of this color will be the first to germinate and the fastest growing.

The color most remote from the wild form, in this case white, is often very slow to germinate and develop.

Knowing these facts the seedsman uses what is called a formula mixture, a mixture so compounded as to give approximately the same number of plants of each color.

Seeds of the dominant color (purple in our example) are excluded because they will appear regardless, and the number of seeds of each other color included will depend on their normal percentage of germination and the average ability of the seedlings to survive.

When the seed is sown in a seed box the first to germinate will be those of the dominant color, and these will make rapid growth. If nothing is disturbed these will be the large seedlings the home gardener picks out, often discarding the rest as small and not worth keeping.

If these first seedlings are carefully removed to a larger box the others that have germinated will have room to develop, and still others may germinate within the next 14 days.

To obtain a reasonable assortment of colors the gardener must select some of each kind of seedling, the strong and the weak, the fast and the slow growing.

The experienced gardener looks for any differences in color of the first true leaves, because the color of leaves is often a clue to the color of future flowers. This rather complicated method should give the amateur a good selection of colors for planting out.

The only way to obtain complete satisfaction is to buy the seed in packets of separate colors, sow the quantity needed of each color, and plant out the different colors to suit personal taste.

While the initial investment in seed will be greater than for one packet of mixed colors, the seed of most annuals can be carefully stored for several years. When the cost is spread over three or four years it is nearly the same as for packets of mixed colors, but the effect of the planted beds give far greater satisfaction.

UVic-done grad photos irk pro photographer

The 1980 graduating class at University of Victoria has been criticized for giving its photographic business to a university service instead of contracting to a commercial photographer.

Scope Photography, 749 Discovery, complains that UVic's media and technical services, which does a variety of photographic work for the university, is taking graduation photos on a subsidized basis in unfair competition with private photographers.

The technical services department bid with commercial photographers in 1978, and was given the job by the graduating class.

Scope complained then about the tendering system on the basis that media and technical services had not been low-bidder.

Scope held a contract to take class pictures last year, when media and technical services did not bid on the work.

Peter Chapman, operator of Scope, said he was eased out this year when the graduation class executive went directly to media and technical services to request class photos.

"My position at present is one of severe embarrassment," said media and technical services manager Edgar Lloyd.

"I must respond to legitimate university requests and find I'm criticized when I do."

He said he is in a no-win position and can appreciate the commercial photographer's point of view.

The UVic administration, which met with representatives of the Victoria Professional Photographers Association about two weeks ago, approves of the class photo work undertaken by media and technical services, provided the fee charged covers all costs.

But it rules out such work as taking pictures of university families and faculty portraits, which it believes belongs to the commercial sector.

Graduating class president Gloria Borean said there was some haste connected with arranging for class photos this year and the executive opted against going through a tendering procedure.

She also said media and technical services would not enter into competitive bidding with commercial photographers.

Ex-broker charged in fraud case

The RCMP commercial crime section today said a former manager of a major Victoria brokerage firm has been charged with defrauding customers of $217,000.

A spokesman said 10 charges of theft, fraud, false pretence and uttering forged documents were laid Wednesday against James Nicholas Simmons, 30.

The charges follow a three-month police investigation.

Simmons is the former manager of the Victoria branch of Wood Gundy Investments Ltd., 707 Fort.

Company spokesman Colin Dobell, of Vancouver, said the losses ~~are~~ fully insured and no client will suffer.

Police said Simmons will be issued a summons to appear in provincial court but no date was given.

Non-union CRD staff getting 7¼%

Non-union employees of the Capital Regional District will receive 7¼ per cent salary increases retroactive to Jan. 1, 1980.

The board approved the raise on Wednesday after being told executive director Dennis Young had carried out a detailed market survey.

The 7¼ per cent is comparable to that provided for in the second year of a two-year contract with the district's union employees.

Savings for islanders with natural gas heat

By MIKE HUGHES

Natural gas could be provided on Vancouver Island 10 to 15 per cent cheaper than heating oil or electricity, Don Olson, president of Vancouver Island Gas, said today.

He said in an interview it is too bad people on the Island aren't being given the opportunity to use the cheaper product.

If the provincial government would make the decision to build a natural gas pipeline to the Island it would also allow those who are planning industrial or commercial developments in the near future to make changes based on natural gas usage, he added.

Olson said Westcoast Transmission Ltd. which has applied to the provincial government to build a $260-million pipeline from Williams Lake to Powell River and then across the strait to Comox, has said cabinet approval now would mean gas distribution on the Island by 1983.

Vancouver Island Gas and Pacific Northern Gas have applied for distribution rights for all of Vancouver Island except Victoria, which is serviced by Hydro.

Olson used the cost per therm — a heat measuring term equal to 100,000 British thermal units — to illustrate the comparative costs of electricity, oil and gas.

He said oil costs 49.54 cents per therm on Vancouver Island and electricity, both on the Island and the lower mainland is about 77.6 cents per therm for residences.

On the other hand, natural gas in the Vancouver area costs only 21 cents per therm.

Olson said the price for natural gas on the Island would be set by the new B.C. Utilities Commission based on the supplier's expenses plus allowance for "reasonable profit."

But, he added, in order to be competitive, the gas companies would have to provide natural gas 10 to 15 per cent cheaper than the alternatives.

"People on the Island should have the right to make a decision as to how they are going to heat their homes," he said.

"They don't at the present time.

Westcoast has offered to build the pipeline at its own expense.

"Why don't we take advantage of it?" he asked.

Olson said his company provides some residences and commercial outlets in Nanaimo with butane for heating purposes but is now in the throes of switching over to propane.

He said the cost of butane has escalated so much in the last four months that it is no longer possible for the company to provide it on a competitive basis without taking a severe loss.

Ferry prop break distrupts traffic

A propeller blade on the B.C. ferry Queen of New Westminster was damaged late Wednesday disrupting service on the Horseshoe Bay-Langdale run.

It is believed the ferry struck a deadhead.

The New Westminster will be drydocked and the Queen of Tsawwassen, normally a standby vessel at Swartz Bay on morning runs, is en route to Langdale to cover the run.

The Queen of Tsawwassen usually makes two runs to Tsawwassen in the afternoon and its 2 p.m. or 6 p.m. sailings from Swartz Bay have been cancelled.

In an effort to ease the crunch, ferry officials have decided to take the Queen of Esquimalt, still filling in for the Queen of Alberni as a vessel for overheight vehicles, and have it make one extra round trip at night.

There will be a 6 p.m. sailing from Tsawwassen and an 8 p.m. sailing from Swartz Bay while the New Westminster is out of service.

B.C. Ferries hopes to have the New Westminster into drydock by the weekend.

OUR FORESTS ARE UNDER ATTACK!

The Mountain Pine Beetle has a ravenous appetite. It, and the many other insects and diseases, destroy enough wood in the forests of British Columbia each year to build 556,000 homes. That is five times greater than the loss caused by wildfire.

A new documentary film "Chewers of Wood" has been produced by the Ministry of Forests to explain how the Mountain Pine Beetle attacks lodgepole pine and the devastating effect it can have on a local economy.

Although the film is about one insect, it highlights the destruction caused by all insects and diseases in their attacks on our forests.

WATCH CHANNEL 10 VICTORIA

The film will be shown on Channel 10 on the dates and times listed below. Included in the one hour program will be a panel discussion on the problem by a group of specialists.

Opening lead — queen of clubs.

What puts a player on notice that there may be a slam? Slam hands don't come along very often — not for your side, at any rate — so when the question does arise, the answer is rather important.

If the slam is made but not bid, you have missed a chance to gain 500 or 750 points, depending on vulnerability. If the slam is bid but not made, the loss is equally great — because you lose the value of the game as well as the undertrick penalty.

Point count sometimes helps you to make your decision. If both hands are balanced, a combined point count of 33 will nearly always produce twelve tricks. But when distributional factors are present the slam will frequently be made with fewer points, provided there are adequate controls in the form of aces, kings, voids or singletons. In all cases, bidding a slam is advisable when there is a better than an even chance to make it.

Another guide to slam bidding stems from the rule that an opening bid facing an opening bid means game. Extending this principle further, an opening bid plus, facing an opening bid plus, indicates a slam. By a plus is meant a king or an ace more than an opening bid. Distributional values are treated as plus values also.

Note how South appraises his values in the present case. Holding an opening bid of his own, vastly enhanced by North's guaranteed good trump support, South clearly has the requisite "opening bid plus." At the same time he knows that North, too, has an "opening bid plus," because North jump-raised two hearts to four hearts. The Blackwood four notrump bid is merely a precautionary measure to cover the slight possibility that the enemy may have two aces.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Friday, February 15, 1980
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Complete transactions — circumstances favor your efforts, desires. Reach beyond apparent limitations. Many persons now are willing to become active allies. Know it and do something about it. Another Aries, an Aquarian and a Libran could figure prominently.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): New approach to various roles proves beneficial. Highlight independence of thought, action. Display pioneering spirit and courage of conviction. Member of opposite sex helps you get to heart of matters. Leo figures prominently.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You are capable of perceiving potential — one who is timid and complains may actually be resentful, envious. Know it and refuse to be deterred from basic course. Accent on communications, financial gain through ability to make numerous contacts in far-flung places.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Study Gemini message. Shake off any tendency to feel restricted. Ask questions, catch up on correspondence, display versatility. Frank money discussion is on agenda. A rotund associate is bearer of good news.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Take stock, review procedures, insist on professional appraisal. Accent the practical, get on more solid footing and let others know you are not without allies. Breakthrough occurs in legal matter — you begin to see proverbial light at end of tunnel.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Review basic procedures. Obtain hint from Leo Message. Get concepts on paper—means articulate ideas and be sure to get credit due. An active, high-strung relative wants attention but know when to draw line.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Add to household accessories. Beautify surroundings. Give serious thought to decoration, purchase of linens and remember special anniversary affecting family member. Taurus, Scorpio and another Libra figure prominently.

SCROPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Let go of losing proposition; past error can be corrected, but not by panicky procedure. A 'psychic' associate can provide valid information. Land and other possessions may be worth more than originally anticipated. Pisces native figures prominently.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Older relative provides valuable information. Know it, be receptive and don't permit pride to block progress. Unusual communication might lead to profitable venture. Know it and act accordingly. Cancer, Capricorn persons figure in scenario.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Financial prospects are bright due to new contact. Stress greater independence, originality. Circumstances favor your efforts. Know it, be direct and confident. You locate item which had been lost, missing or stolen.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Gain valuable hint from studying Capricorn message. Optimism can now replace gloom. Push ahead, display pioneering spirit. Wear bright colors, make personal appearance, assert views in positive manner. A stubborn associate becomes important ally.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Play waiting game. Get second emotional wind. Follow through on hunch. Check behind the scenes. Detect trends, subtle nuances. Someone is trying to tell you something. Know it, be receptive and shake off fears, doubts.

IF FEBRUARY 15 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are unique, musical, intuitive, emotional and very popular with the opposite sex. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons play important roles in your life. September could be your most significant month of 1980, a year featuring production, responsibility and greater financial rewards. If single, you could marry. If married, there could be an addition to family. Married or single, you will be in more direct control of your own destiny.

U.S. weighs aid for El Salvador

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — The Carter administration is weighing plans to send U.S. Army advisers and up to $7 million in military sales and credits to El Salvador this year in an effort to prop up its faltering new government and block a leftist takeover, according to official sources.

Leftists Wednesday seized the Panamanian embassy in San Salvador for the second time in a month as well as a city administrative office, demanding freedom for jailed comrades and better water service. Meanwhile, the same organization's occupation of the Spanish embassy went into the ninth day.

The U.S.-proposed security assistance program, put together over the past several weeks to complement an emergency $50 million in economic aid also planned, has not yet been accepted by the Salvadoran government.

But it already has caused deep division within the State Department.

Proponents of the plan say stronger internal security against left and right-wing violence in El Salvador is the only way of assuring that the current U.S.-backed moderate government can carry out vital reforms without civil war.

The program calls for at least three 12-man Army mobile training teams (MTTs) to instruct each of El Salvador's three army battalions in logistics, communications and intelligence techniques. A six-person MTT was sent to El Salvador for five days last November, along with $200,000 worth of tear gas, gas masks and bulletproof vests, to give instruction in riot control.

Because of the sensitive nature of the program, both here and in El Salvador, the administration has sought to involve other countries, including West Germany, Spain and Venezuela in the security assistance effort.

The new takeovers Wednesday in San Salvador came one day after leftist occupations of two other buildings ended in police attacks, gunfire in which 10 persons were killed and arrests made.

Witnesses said a busload of armed persons forced their way into the Panamanian embassy, taking Ambassador David Perez Ramos, a female secretary and a maid hostage. A spokesman for the Popular Leagues of Feb. 28, or LP-28, said the invaders were unarmed and the takeover was peaceful.

LP-28 members were also holding five hostages at the Spanish embassy, which was seized on Feb. 5.

Meanwhile, El Salvador's largest leftist alliance, the Popular Revolutionary Bloc, occupied the administrative offices of the city water and sewer department and took as many as 250 hostages. The bloc demanded extension of water lines to large areas of the city that are without service and the release of a number of persons it said were arrested Wednesday on various charges.

An LP-28 spokesman said the embassy was re-taken "to force the government to free 23 of our companions" captured Tuesday when police stormed the Christian Democratic party headquarters. LP-28 occupied it Jan. 29 in an attempt to force the resignation of the party's two representatives on the military-dominated junta.

MP kidnapping raises Lebanon tension level

BEIRUT (UPI) — President Elias Sarkis and his top aides met today in a crisis atmosphere intensified by the kidnapping of a rightist member of parliament and fighting in Beirut and north Lebanon, government sources.

Police and security officials stepped up the search for the kidnapped parliament member, a top official of the rightist Phalangist Party.

They were also investigating reports of a shooting incident outside the Kuwaiti embassy.

The rightist Phalangist radio said gunmen opened fire at the embassy building a few hundred yards away from a small Lebanese army barracks and the scene of clashes Wednesday between troops and Palestinian guerrillas.

Kuwaiti embassy officials were not available for immediate comment on the incident.

Party officials said the parliamentarian, Edmond Rizk, was alive. "Efforts are continuing to secure his release," an official said.

Twenty-four people have been killed in Lebanon since the Syrians announced the decision to withdraw 5,000 troops, setting off fears of renewed civil war between Christians and a leftist Moslem-Palestinian alliance.

Gandhi wins round no. 2

NEW DELHI (AP) — A special court set up by the previous Indian government to hasten criminal proceedings against Prime Minister Indira Gandhi ruled today it has no jurisdiction in the matter.

Morarji Desai's government had no legal power to set up the courts, a judge ruled.

It was Gandhi's second legal victory in a month against what she calls a "political vendetta.

Border stretch set up

WASHINGTON (CP) — The long arm of the computer is being extended to help American law enforcement officers collar Canadian criminals in the United States.

On June 15, the FBI's National Crime Information Centre puts into effect a Canadian warrants file that will permit American police to determine immediately whether a Canadian warrant is outstanding on any individual.

If a fugitive is wanted in Canada, the RCMP will be contacted immediately to start extradition proceedings, Lawrence Lawler, chief of the National Crime Information Centre, said in an interview Wednesday.

The entry of Canadian names in American computers will be done by the RCMP in Ottawa, usually after it is requested by a city or provincial police force.

Egypt confirms training, arming Afghan rebels

Times News Services

Egypt is training Afghan rebels, as alleged by the Soviet Union, and will arm them before sending them home to fight Soviet intervention in their country, Egyptian Defence Minister Kamal Hassan Ali said.

He did not disclose the size or location of the camps or how many Afghans were involved, but told reporters in Cairo on Wednesday, "Egypt is training some of them to some extent," and that President Anwar Sadat approved the project last month.

Diplomatic sources in London, meanwhile, said Moscow has advised key Asian, European and African states that it will start pulling some of its estimated 90,000 soldiers out of Afghanistan and open talks with Pakistan as soon as the situation stabilizes along the Afghan-Pakistan border.

A Pakistani government spokesman said such talks would be welcome, but only after a complete withdrawal of Soviet forces from Afghanistan, Pakistan's neighbor to the northwest.

However, Indian officials said Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko gave them little or no hope for an early withdrawal from the landlocked Central Asian country on the Soviet Union's southern flank.

Gromyko, attending a New Delhi banquet to honor his Indian counterpart, warned Pakistan it must end "intrusions into the territory of Afghanistan" if it wants peace along the border.

Indian spokesman J. N. Dixit said the two states have different interpretations of the Soviet intervention, but that Gromyko has "taken note" of the Indian position "that there should be non-interference in the internal affairs of sovereign countries and that frontiers should be invioable."

Moscow poured tens of thousands of soldiers into Afghanistan in December in an effort to crush a Moslem rebellion against the Communist regime and to back the Dec. 27 coup that eliminated President Hafizullah Amin and replaced him with Babrak Karmal.

Soviet Defence Minister Dmitry Ustinov defended that action Wednesday, repeating the Kremlin's claim it intervened following "the launching of an undeclared war on Afghanistan by the U.S. imperialists and Chinese hegemonists."

President Carter, at a Washington news conference, reiterated his call for a U.S. boycott of the Moscow Olympics this summer if Soviet forces do not leave Afghanistan.

The International Olympic Committee this week overrode the U.S. protest and voted to hold the Olympics in Moscow as planned.

Commenting on the Carter conference, Radio Moscow said today Carter's latest remarks "showed once again his adherence to a position of strength" toward the Soviet Union.

The radio's English-language world service said Carter "attempted to justify the continuing buildup of the United States' military spending."

Meanwhile, the U.S. warned the Soviet Union Wednesday not to take reprisals against American airlines because of the refusal of protesting New York airport workers to handle Aeroflot flights.

"It would be extremely unfortunate and highly unhelpful at this time if the Soviet Union were to resort to retaliatory measures," the State Department said.

But the department also criticized ticket agents and baggage handlers who have refused to handle the Soviet airline's planes at John F. Kennedy International Airport.

"I would like to stress again in strongest possible terms that we do not believe that union actions against Aeroflot at New York or anywhere are in our national interests," a spokesman said during the daily State Department news briefing.

The spokesman described Soviet press criticism of the New York protest as part of a "propaganda campaign designed to place responsibility on the United States government for Aeroflot's problems."

"We've endeavored to assure the continued safe operations of Aeroflot's two weekly scheduled flights to the United States and live up to the obligations which are in our bilateral civil aviation agreement," he said.

In Moscow, the newspaper Sovietsky Sport accused the United States of staging "provocations" against Aeroflot.

The Kennedy airport protest hampered the Soviet airline's efforts to carry athletes, journalists and referees to the 1980 Winter Olympics in Lake Placid, N.Y.

New York airport authorities have instructed the Soviet planes to land at Dulles International Airport near Washington, D.C.

White faction votes today

SALISBURY (Reuter) — Rhodesia's dwindling white minority votes today in its final election before Britain's last African colony attains lawful independence under a black-majority government.

The country's more than 200,000 whites will have only 20 of the 100 seats in the independence parliament and may constitute only a token presence after 90 years of supremacy.

Former prime minister Ian Smith's Rhodesian Front party is expected to sweep the polls.

The black majority in Rhodesia will have separate elections Feb. 27-29.

The white vote will set the seal on the decline of white political power after the seven-year war against Patriotic Front nationalist guerrillas striving to overthrow the white minority.

But Smith has led his followers in a rear-guard action to maintain some influence.

The former prime minister has been urging supporters to persuade their black employees to vote for moderate blacks — not for the Marxist-leaning guerrilla leader Robert Mugabe.

The white election will be held against a backdrop of mounting tension in the ceasefire.

About 300 persons have died in hostilities since the ceasefire was declared and a three-cornered wrangle between Mugabe, his former ally Joshua Nkomo and British Gov. Lord Soames has added to the strains.

Nkomo met Mugabe Wednesday for the first time since the two men returned from exile last month, but were apparently unsuccesful in solving their differences. Mugabe has chosen to contest the black election separately from Nkomo.

Nkomo has launched a series of veiled attacks on Mugabe, accusing his Zimbabwe African National Liberation Army guerrillas of intimidating voters in wide areas of eastern Rhodesia.

Lord Soames also makes these accusations against Mugabe and the political row has caused tension among Mugabe's guerrillas in Commonwealth-monitored ceasefire assembly points, nationalist sources said.

Meanwhile, police arrested five senior officials of nationalist leader Robert Mugabe's party in the southern town of Shabani early today, a party spokesman said.

Rainbow Warrior seized

CHERBOURG (AP) — The French navy today blocked anti-nuclear militants aboard the Greenpeace Foundation's ship Rainbow Warrior from halting a shipment of spent nuclear fuel bound for a reprocessing plant near this port on the north coast of France.

The French navy then moved in and seized the Rainbow Warrior. Police said its captain was arrested and the rest of the crew was taken into military custody. One of the crew members was reported slightly injured. None of them was identified.

No dirty-trick charges laid

Shadow will remain until file public: NDP

By JAKE BANKY

No charges will be laid as a result of the four-month long RCMP investigation into allegations of political dirty tricks by Social Credit in the last provincial election campaign.

Attorney-General Allan Williams said today no evidence was found to warrant the laying of charges either for sending forged letters to newspapers or for counselling such forgeries.

The minister said he will not release the foot-thick RCMP file on which Crown counsel based the decision not to lay charges.

NDP leader Dave Barrett said Williams' announcement does not mean an end to the lettergate-dirty tricks affair which has flourished in the headlines since last September.

"The shadow over Social Credit will remain until the full RCMP report is released," Barrett said.

"To investigate oneself and then to say 'I am clear' is not good enough."

Three Socred officials resigned and four were fired during the course of the dirty tricks affair.

Of 54 questionable letters investigated by the RCMP, only 10 were shown to have been signed fictitiously or with forged names, Williams said.

However, it was either found impossible to prove who wrote them or the letters failed to meet the legal qualification for prosecution under the Criminal Code.

Williams said for a charge to be laid, the letter must be shown to have been written with the intent to be used to prejudice someone "or that some person should be induced, by the belief that the document is genuine, to do or refrain from doing anything."

Williams maintained the writing of forged letters during the election capaign did not reveal such a motive.

He also said there was no evidence of a co-ordinated program of false letter writing by Social Credit party workers, although two former Socred caucus researchers have said there was such a campaign.

The RCMP investigation into allegations of caucus researchers counselling to commit forgery also came up blank, the attorney-general reported.

Williams said while remarks by some researchers might have been construed as advocating the use of false names on letters to the editor, it could not be proved that this was "advocated for the prohibited intent."

In other words, the evidence failed to meet the requirements of a "counselling charge" under the Criminal Code.

Williams, however, attacked the Socred letter writing practices as "cowardly, reprehensible and irresponsible."

He urged newspaper editors and publishers in B.C. to take steps to ensure that the letters they publish in the future are authentic.

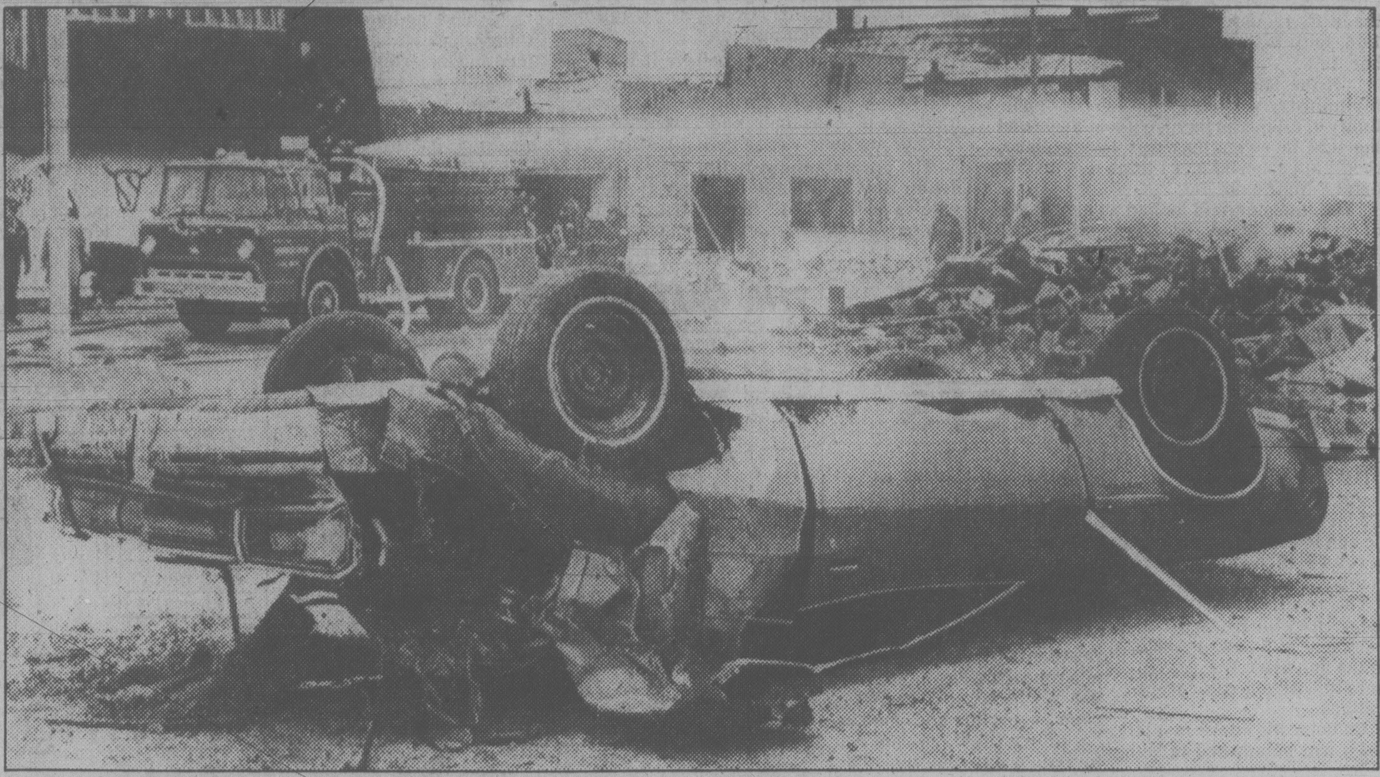
Williams said he does not know how much the RCMP investigation will cost the taxpayer but he agreed it will be substantial.

Two former Socred researchers, Jack Kelly, who resigned, and Ellen Mackay, who was fired, have threatened to bring suits for wrongful dismissal.

Their lawyer, Robert Gardner of Vancouver said today he is "very gratified" to hear the decision.

He said he is unsure whether the two want to pursue a civil action for wrongful dismissal.

Gardner said the pair received three months' severence pay after they were fired but neither has been able to find another job.



RUBBLE SMOULDERS after explosion levelled a downtown block of stores and apartments and caused a fire that damaged several adjoining buildings early today in Essex, Ont., about 20 kilometres east of Windsor. Police say a car struck a gas meter behind a hardware store and the leaking gas filled the store just before the explosion. No deaths were reported but a passenger in the car was reported in danger of losing an arm. An impaired driving charge was laid. Damage was estimated at $4 to $6 million.

Fall by Read blows medal

Times News Services

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. — Ken Read of Calgary, Canada's major hope for a gold medal in Alpine skiing at the Winter Olympics, fell near the top of the course today and failed to finish the downhill competition.

Leonard Stock of Austria edged countryman Petr Wirnsberger for the gold.

Steve Podborski, 23, of Toronto won the bronze medal, the first ever taken by a Canadian in Oympic men's Alpine skiing and the first medal for Canada at the current games.

Read, winner of two major downhill races this winter, was not injured. He spilled on the third turn when his inside ski came off.

Dave Murray of Whistler, B.C., placed ninth while Dave Irwin of Vernon finished 10th.

No funding for games

Times News Services

A Progressive Conservative government would withhold financial support from the Canadian Olympic Association if it proceeds with the Summer Games in Moscow, Prime Minister Clark said Wednesday.

The decision by the International Olympic Committee to proceed with the games is wrong, Clark said in an interview in Hamilton, and said he will seek a boycott.

"I think the IOC clearly was wrong," Clark said of the committee's decision Tuesday to keep the Games in Moscow despite a request from United States President Carter to move them because of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

Clark said he will still ask Canadian athletes to boycott the Moscow Olympics if Soviet troops are not out of Afghanistan by next Wednesday, two days after the general election.

In Vancouver, Liberal Leader Pierre Trudeau reiterated he still would support an Olympic boycott if enough nations were prepared to.

He said: "I don't think support of a boycott that is going to show the Western nations and the Third World divided . . . is a good thing.

"I think this kind of symbolic gesture of boycotting the Olympics is only effective if it shows there is a massive participation not only by Western nations but by Third World nation."

In Washington, President Carter says he sees "no possibility" of U.S. participation in the Moscow Summer Olympics if the Soviets do not meet his Feb. 20 deadline for withdrawal from Afghanistan.

Living cost doubled since '71

Times News Services

The cost of living in Canada has doubled since 1971, Statistics Canada said today in its monthly Consumer Price Index.

The cost of living rose 0.6 percent in January to bring the CPI — which was at the 100 level in 1971 — to 200.1 in January. As a result, the 12-month inflation rise for the last 12 months now stands at 9.5 percent.

Viewed in terms of buying power, what cost the consumer $100 in 1971, now costs $200.10.

The government statistics agency said that higher transportation and housing costs along with higher food costs were mainly responsible for the over-all increase.

Increases were also registered for beef prices, coupled with higher cereal and bakery products.

The food index rose by 0.3 per cent in January, down from a 1.4 per cent increase in December.

Despite the reduction in air fares, transportation costs increased one per cent to bring the increase from a year earlier to 12.5 per cent and to lead the index for all consumer prices. Food and clothing are tied in second place at a rise of 11.3 per cent from January, 1979.

However, Canada's inflation rate is still well below that in the United States. The average rate for 1979 was 9.1 per cent while that in the U.S. was 13.3 per cent.

Twelve-month cost-of-living increases ranged from a low of 7.6 per cent in Vancouver to a high of 10.3 per cent in Quebec City.

Meanwhile, the average weekly salary of a Canadian worker, expressed in 1971 constant dollars, fell to $150 from $155 between the fourth quarter of 1977 and the second quarter of last year, says a report published by the Conference Board in Canada.

This drop of 3.2 per cent in the average salary represents a loss of purchasing power of about $4 billion, and the report says it is attributable to inflation and government controls on wages and prices.

Companies fared better than the workers.

The report says that between the fourth quarter of 1976 and the second quarter of 1979, company profits, expressed as their share of the national income, increased to 15.8 per cent from 12.5 per cent.

Hostages free in 48 hours?

Times News Services

Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr said today the 50 American hostages could be freed in 48 hours if President Carter accepts a plan approved by Ayatollah Khomeini.

And a UN spokesman said today he hopes to to announce soon — "perhaps in the next 24 hours" — the composition of an international commission of inquiry to investigate alleged crimes against the shah during his 37-year rule.

The extradition of deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi to Iran was no longer a pre-condition for the hostages' release, Bani-Sadr confirmed.

However, a spokesman for the Moslem militants holding the U.S. embassy in Tehran said today he doesn't believe Khomeini has approved the release of the hostages prior to the extradition of the shah.

The spokesman conceded there had been no contact for some time between Khomeini and the militants, but stressed that the militants would only take orders from the 79-year-old Khomeini.

The Panamanian government has reportedly given Iran until March 22 to present its case for the extradition of the shah.

Speaking from Tehran to the Italian television network RAI, Bani-Sadr said if there were complications, the release of the captives could take two months.

"There is a proposal on President Carter's desk now which, if he accepts, can lead to the release of the hostages in 48 hours," Bani-Sadr said.

Bani-Sadr said the release of the hostages depends not only on an investigation into the regime of the deposed shah but also on America's guaranteeing Iran's geopolitical and economic independence.

"We depend on the United States for spare parts. They are essential for us," said

Tito remains critical

BELGRADE (AP) — Doctors reported today that President Josip Tito was in critical condition despite intensive measures to save the 87-year-old Yugoslav leader's life.

Prime Minister Veselin Djuranovic today cut short an official visit to East Germany to return to Belgrade.

"A certain improvement took place following the intensive measures of treatment, but the condition is still very difficult," the doctors said in a bulletin.

One Western diplomat said a Yugoslav source reported Tito's death was believed imminent. "But I take it that it's a question of days rather than hours," the diplomat said.

As Tito's condition worsened, the National Defence Council called for intensified defence preparations.

The council, drawn from the same group that will run the country if Tito dies, met Wednesday and "discussed the implementation of a program of development of the Yugoslav armed forces and the level of their capability," the official Tanjug news agency said.

In Washington, President Carter said Wednesday the United States is willing to seriously consider any request for aid from Yugoslavia if it is threatened by the Soviet Union.

But the President said Yugoslav leaders had stressed to him that they were capable of dealing with any external threats.

Mair disillusioned on H-program

By JAKE BANKY

Health Minister Rafe Mair is losing faith in the controversial heroin treatment program he inherited from his predecessor Bob McClelland.

Following a tour of the Brannen Lake treatment centre near Nanaimo Wednesday the minister admitted: "Where I was 60-40 in favor of it a few months ago, I probably have reversed myself after looking at the program and talking to people."

Mair gave two reasons for becoming disillusioned.

After talking to patients at Brannen Lake, he concluded it would be difficult to mix voluntary patients with addicts sent there by the courts.

"The mix is a very difficult one for the staff and for the clients," he said.

But the main reason is the lengthy legal battle the government faces in trying to reverse the court ruling that the compulsory aspect of the program is illegal.

Mair estimates it could take another two years to settle the question.

"And in the meantime I've got to have an alcohol and drug program."

That means, he said, that he must view the situation as if the government has lost its case.

"I'm not saying one way or the other whether we'll have a compulsory program even if the courts change the decision," he said. "That question is very much up in the air."

The entire heroin treatment program is under-reassessment, Mair said, and its future is undecided. But he showed where his personal preference lies when he said: "My prejudice has swung from slightly in favor to slightly against."

The minister was unable to say what the entire program has cost the taxpayer so far.

He put the cost of operating the Brannen Lake centre at around $2 million this fiscal year and estimated it will have treated 120 to 125 patients during the year.

"That's not bad," he said.

The question of compulsory treatment for drug addicts goes before the B.C. Appeal Court in April. The court is expected to take several months making its decision.

Mair said the treatment centre is no "Club Med," as charged recently by a journalist who checked himself in to check the layout.

It does have a swimming pool and a gymnasium and some nice work areas, he said, "but it certainly is no luxury spot. Far from it."

The minister admitted, however, there isn't much the authorities can do to stop freeloaders who want a vacation at public expense.

Anyone asking for admission as a drug addict would have to spend a couple of weeks in isolation, watching TV while being watched by medical staff.

But after that they could enjoy six to eight weeks of swimming, boating and loafing before being discharged.

Blast, fire rock Camosun

Exploding propane tanks rocked the Camosun College area today when a fire ripped across the roof of the college's new multi-purpose building.

A huge pall of black smoke covered the area as Saanich, Victoria and Oak Bay fire departments responded to the blaze at the building, which will cost $5.9 million when completed.

Witnesses said they heard at least four explosions.

Alf Engel, 1915 Ernest, said he heard one long continuing explosion and then three distinct blasts.

"The first one sounded like a low-volume rumbling dynamite explosion, and then came three sharp ones in a row. Right after that, the smoke started pouring out."

The blaze apparently started when a large kettle of tar near roofing material caught fire and exploded on the top floor construction area.

The fire caused the propane tanks, used to heat the tar, to explode.

"It sounded like four or five bombs going off," one neighbor said.

The burning tar flowed along the roof and flames, fanned by a strong wind, started the blaze along the length of the structure's top.

There were no reports of injuries.

The fire started while workmen who had been on the roof were off the job in their lunch break.

One student said if the workmen had been on the job, the fire could have been a "real tragedy".

Students Sharon Lepetich, 18, and Sharon Guzyk, 18, said they were sitting in class when they were rocked by the initial blast.

"We looked out and we could see the flames roaring on the roof," they told the Times.

All of the students in nearby buildings were evacuated.

Firemen reported they had the blaze under control shortly before noon.

But while it lasted, witnesses said it was a spectacular sight.

People in the area said the pall of black smoke looked almost like a tornado.

The multi-purpose building, designed by architcect Terrence Williams, contains new classrooms, offices and a lecture theatre.

The contrtract for the first phase of the building was for $1.15 and was awarded Farmer Construction Ltd. last May.

"A certain improvement took place following the intensive measures of treatment, but the condition is still very difficult," the doctors said in a bulletin.

As Tito's condition worsened, the National Defence Council called for intensified defence preparations.

Hostages free in 48 hours?

Times News Services

Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr said today the 50 American hostages could be freed in 48 hours if President Carter accepts a plan approved by Ayatollah Khomeini.

And a UN spokesman said today he hopes to announce soon — "perhaps in the next 24 hours" — the composition of an international commission of inquiry to investigate alleged crimes against the shah during his 37-year rule.

The extradition of deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi to Iran was no longer a pre-condition for the hostages' release, Bani-Sadr confirmed.

However, a spokesman for the Moslem militants holding the U.S. embassy in Tehran said today he doesn't believe Khomeini has approved the release of the hostages prior to the extradition of the shah.

The spokesman conceded there had been no contact for some time between Khomeini and the militants, but stressed that the militants would only take orders from the 79-year-old Khomeini.

The Panamanian government has reportedly given Iran until March 22 to present its case for the extradition of the shah.

Speaking from Tehran to the Italian television network RAI, Bani-Sadr said if there were complications, the release of the captives could take two months.

"There is a proposal on President Carter's desk now which, if he accepts, can lead to the release of the hostages in 48 hours," Bani-Sadr said.

Bani-Sadr said the release of the hostages depends not only on an investigation into the regime of the deposed shah but also on America's guaranteeing Iran's geopolitical and economic independence.

"We depend on the United States for spare parts. They are essential for us," said

Living costs doubled

Times News Services

The cost of living in Canada has doubled since 1971, Statistics Canada said today in its monthly Consumer Price Index.

The cost of living rose 0.6 percent in January to bring the CPI — which was at the 100 level in 1971 — to 200.1 in January. As a result, the 12-month inflation rise for the last 12 months now stands at 9.5 percent.

Viewed in terms of buying power, what cost the consumer $100 in 1971, now costs $200.10.

The government statistics agency said that higher transportation and housing costs along with higher food costs were mainly responsible for the over-all increase.

Increases were also registered for beef prices, coupled with higher cereal and bakery products.

The food index rose by 0.3 per cent in January, down from a 1.4 per cent increase in December.

Despite the reduction in air fares, transportation costs increased one per cent to bring the increase from a year earlier to 12.5 per cent and to lead the index for all consumer prices. Food and clothing are tied in second place at a rise of 11.3 per cent from January, 1979.

However, Canada's inflation rate is still well below that in the United States. The average rate for 1979 was 9.1 per cent while that in the U.S. was 13.3 per cent.

Mair disillusioned on H-program

By JAKE BANKY

Health Minister Rafe Mair is losing faith in the controversial heroin treatment program he inherited from his predecessor Bob McClelland.

Following a tour of the Brannen Lake treatment centre near Nanaimo Wednesday the minister admitted: "Where I was 60-40 in favor of it a few months ago, I probably have reversed myself after looking at the program and talking to people."

Mair gave two reasons for becoming disillusioned.

After talking to patients at Brannen Lake, he concluded it would be difficult to mix voluntary patients with addicts sent there by the courts.

"The mix is a very difficult one for the staff and for the clients," he said.

But the main reason is the lengthy legal battle the government faces in trying to reverse the court ruling that the compulsory aspect of the program is illegal.

Mair estimates it could take another two years to settle the question.

"And in the meantime I've got to have an alcohol and drug program."

That means, he said, that he must view the situation as if the government has lost its case.

"I'm not saying one way or the other whether we'll have a compulsory program even if the courts change the decision," he said. "That question is very much up in the air."

The entire heroin treatment program is under reassessment, Mair said, and its future is undecided. But he showed where his personal preference lies when he said: "My prejudice has swung from slightly in favor to slightly against."

The minister was unable to say what the entire program has cost the taxpayer so far.

He put the cost of operating the Brannen Lake centre at around $2 million this fiscal year and estimated it will have treated 120 to 125 patients during the year.

"That's not bad," he said.

The question of compulsory treatment for drug addicts goes before the B.C. Appeal Court in April. The court is expected to take several months making its decision.

Mair said the treatment centre is no "Club Med," as charged recently by a journalist who checked himself in to check the layout.

It does have a swimming pool and a gymnasium and some nice work areas, he said, "but it certainly is no luxury spot. Far from it."

The minister admitted, however, there isn't much the authorities can do to stop freeloaders who want a vacation at public expense.

Anyone asking for admission as a drug addict would have to spend a couple of weeks in isolation, watching TV while being watched by medical staff.

But after that they could enjoy six to eight weeks of swimming, boating and loafing before being discharged.

today's markets

Toronto

The Toronto stock market fell extremely sharply in active mid-session trading today.

Twelve of the 14 stock groups were lower, with the largest drop in transportation. Shares of communications and forest products companies advanced.

Volume of trading by 1 p.m. was 5.42 million shares, compared with 6.73 million shares at the same time Wednesday.

Declines outnumbered advances 322 to 130 with 199 issues unchanged.

Trading in shares of Patino N. V. resumed at noon following a halt Wednesday. The stock was unchanged at $33 by 1 p.m.

The company said it will buy 332,878 of its outstanding shares from three shareholders at $26 (U.S.) a share and will offer to buy the remaining shares at the same price.

Among industrials, Falconbridge Nickel A dropped 6½ to $135½, Canadian Pacific Investments 2¾ to $45¼, Gulf Canada 2½ to $133½, Dome Petroleum 2⅛ to $71⅛ and Inco 1⅞ to $34½.

Bralorne Resources rose 3½ to $27½, Alberta Energy 1 to $45, MacMillan Bloedel ½ to $30½, Eastern Provincial Airways ½ to $7½ and Canada Permanent Mortgage ⅛ to $18¼.

McIntyre Mines lost 5 to $92, United Keno Hill 3 to $50 and Carolin Mines 2½ to $22½. Pine Point Mines gained ⅛ to $37⅜ and Redstone Resources 14 cents to $1.40.

Vancouver

Prices were down in heavy trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

Of the stocks that traded, 123 advanced, 247 declined and 154 remained steady.

B.C. Resources Investment Corp. led trading in the industrials, declining .05 to $7.80 on 56,270 shares and MacMillan Bloedel remained unchanged at $30⅝ on 10,000. Proflex Ltd. dropped .01 to .27 on 7,500 and Ardiem Industrial Corp. remained steady at .22 on 2,500. CDA Development Corp. remained unchanged at $11⅝ and Gregory Industries remained steady at $5¾.

On the resource and development board, Liberty Petroleums gained .05 to $3.80 on 122,730 shares and Pacific Resources advanced .02 to .54 on 86,600. Hecate Gold Corp. dropped .35 to $1.00 on 76,500 and Amflo Petroleum rose .20 to $3.00 on 74,100. Highwood Resources Warrants gained .04 to .30 and Cream Silver Mines dropped .07 to $1.29.

Grenoble Energy led trading on the curb exchange, remaining steady at $1.75 on 80,740 shares and Tamarind Holding remained unchanged at .61 on 75,500. Nomad Mines Ltd. dropped .25 to $3.65 on 50,700 and West Trend Resources was down .25 to $2.95 on 43,890. Sibola Mines Ltd. gained .09 to .80 and Cleaver Lake Mines dropped .02 to .28.

New York

The New York stock market turned downward today, running into some resistance at its highest level in almost a year and a half.

Losers outnumbered gainers by a 4-to-3 margin in the broad tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts noted that the market had begun to retreat in the latter stages of Wednesday's session.

Once the Dow Jones industrials climbed past the 900 level, some traders evidently decided the time was ripe for cashing in a few of their holdings.

Brokers said investors also seemed to be inclined to hold back awaiting developments in the effort to reach agreement on a plan for the release of the hostages in Iran.

Gold mining issues gave ground as the bullion price eased in world markets.

Bonds

TORONTO (CP) — Prices advanced in active trading on the Canadian bond market Wednesday, following a higher trend in the U.S. market. The short end of the market rose 25 cents. Mid-, long-term, provincial and corporate issues gained one point.

Cattle

CALGARY (CP) — Receipts to 11 a.m. Thursday at the Calgary public stockyards of 475 head consisted mainly of slaughter cows with a light run of slaughter steers and heifers.

Trade was moderate on good condition kinds and dull on average condition kinds and overweight animals. A1-2 slaughter steers traded steady. There were too few slaughter heifers sold to establish trends but a few heifers on hand sold to $73.75. All classes of slaughter cows sold $1 lower. Good bulls were steady.

A1-2 steers over 1,000 lbs. 75-76.20; common to medium 69-72. A1-2 heifers over 850 lbs. 72-73.75. D1-2 cows 53-56; D3-5 48-53. Good bulls 67-69.50.

PetroCan shopping for oil

VANCOUVER (CP) — Petro-Canada officials are shopping for oil supplies in Mexico and Venezuela this week in an apparent reversal of previous Progressive Conservative government policy barring the Crown corporation from conducting international oil transactions.

Wilbert Hopper, the Crown corporation's president, and Ian Stewart, deputy energy minister, have gone to carry on discussions about oil transactions, Energy Minister Ray Hnatyshyn confirmed Tuesday.

"Since I could not go, I considered it appropriate to send officials to continue the discussions," the minister said, noting he had planned to go last month but the election intervened.

Hopper said last July that he had been ordered not to involve his company in international oil deals.

Hnatyshyn explained that Canadian inventories have been below secure levels recently and that Petro-Canada now was involved in the buildup of supplies.

Meanwhile, a corporation official in Ottawa says Canada has been lucky to have avoided rationing this winter. Unusually mild Canadian weather from November through January protected Canada's limited reserves of crude oil, heating oil and engine fuels, he said.

"Inventories are fairly good now in heating oils and diesel," he said. "We had to buy some at high prices.

"We had to look at some luck to get us through."

Under the previous Liberal government, the corporation and president Hopper were part of the initialling of an agreement with the government of Mexico for a nation-to-nation deal including the import of some Mexican crude to Canada.

However, after the Liberals defeat May 22, the new cabinet of Prime Minister Joe Clark declared that the corporation would have to scale down its operations in anticipation of a review of the corporation's activities.

Swastika found on burned synagogue

EDMONTON (CP) — A single, roughly-drawn swastika was found at the scene of a fire police say was deliberately set at the Beth Shalom Synagogue in Edmonton Wednesday.

The fire destroyed priceless religious manuscripts and damage was estimated at about $1 million.

Six sheepskin Torah scrolls — one more than 150 years old — were burned when flames swept through the Synagogue's sanctuary area.

Advice to keep quiet against CP Rail rules

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (CP) — A CP Rail official who warned a colleague not to talk about parts of a faulty journal bearing found shortly after the Nov. 10 derailment of a CP Rail train was not conforming to proper emergency procedures, a company official said Wednesday.

Testifying at a royal commission into the accident, John Kelsall, superintendent of CP Rail's Sudbury division, said that after treating injured persons and reporting an accident, an employee is required to search for the cause and inform company investigators.

But Peel Regional Police constable Elliot McConnell testified earlier that he overheard a CP Rail official tell a co-worker "not to say too much over the radio about this" after they found a burned-off journal stub. Earlier evidence indicated it was part of an overheated journal bearing that caused the accident.

"I don't know why he'd say that," Kelsall said. "It's not in conformity with instructions."

Later, John Cannings, lawyer for train manufacturer Hawker Siddeley Canada Ltd., complained to commission chairman Mr. Justice Samuel Grange of the Ontario Supreme Court about difficulty in acquiring relevant documents, copies of exhibits and advance notice of prospective witnesses.

He said he sent a letter to CP Rail requesting copies of more than 30 documents relating to the installation, location and efficiency record of hot box detectors Cannings said he received no reply to his request.
